Volunteer Firemen's Pride

By BILL HURSCHMANN

Why do 32 men risk life and limb to fight fires for a mere $5 an hour?

"It's the pride the fellows take in their work and their accomplishments," says George Riccomi, chief of the Colma Fire Protection District.

"Our men take care of our equipment, the station — everything. And when there's a fire, it's a matter of pride in doing a good job and in knowing you're doing a good job," he said.

The 32 men who man the $128,000 a year fire department all are volunteers, as is the chief himself. Some are nurserymen, others carpenters, mechanics, ice cream delivery men, motel owners, grocery clerks. Riccomi is an employe of the Daly City Scavenger Co.

But, during the daytime, when the fire department's horn blasts a warning throughout Colma, as many men as possible rush to the 50 Reiner St. station to don their firefighting gear and prepare for the worst. And during the evening hours, maybe while watching television or feasting on lasagna, volunteer firemen are always alert for an alarm sounding from their portable Plectron boxes, which ring automatically when a fire has been reported.

During the day, 13 to 18 volunteers generally respond to the horn blast. At night, more than two dozen men appear in response to a reported blaze, ready to dash to the area in two pumpers and a squad truck the department maintains.

And, says Riccomi, the response time is unbelievable. A recent fire was reported at 5:39 p.m., and firemen left the station at 5:41 and on the scene at 5:42. Another alarm sounded at 4:25 p.m., with firemen leaving the station at 4:28 and on the scene at 4:30. "The farthest area we serve is only seven minutes away," the chief says.

The fire district services all of Colma and its surrounding areas, including Broadmoor, Sterling Park and Garden Village. Last year it responded to 287 calls.

Riccomi has been a volunteer for 28 years, and chief since 1961. But he isn't the department's veteran. Les Balestra began volunteering in 1932; Capt. Ray Ciotti in 19[illegible].

"Despite their ages, these men get out there and fight the fires," Riccomi says. "Although, at times, the captain gets a little carried away and we have to slow him down a bit."

In addition to responding to fires, it is necessary the volunteers keep in shape. For this purpose, the department conducts a two-hour practice drill [illegible]y're drilled in everything from hose line relays to tower drills to pump and ladder drills to first aide and resuscitation.

"It's a pretty good workout for the men," Riccomi says. "And they're in pretty good shape, except maybe some of them eat a little too much spaghetti." Most of the 32 volunteers are Italians. Only one is single.

Besides the rigors of fire fighting, the men also engage in social activities, both for themselves and for their families.

Almost every night groups of men get together to play cards at the station house. On the fifth Thursday of a month, four volunteers are selected to cook an extravagant meal for the other volunteers.

In September, the fire department holds a barbecue for volunteers and their families. In November, it's an annual dinner-dance.

Since the Colma Fire Department was formed in 1925, it has changed a lot. It's even changed in Riccomi's 28-year tenure.

"When I began, we had only one engine, a 1941 White with a 500-gallon per minute pumper. Broadmoor wasn't completed. Neither was Sterling Park," Riccomi says.

"Now we've got two Seagrave pumpers that pump 1,000 gallons a minute with rebuilt 1972 and 1973 motors, and a lot more fire hydrants."

One story Riccomi will never forget involved, of all things, a cat and a pole. It's true, he says, that firemen receive calls to get cats down from high places.

"This particular cat used to climb poles all the time. In fact, I already had rescued him twice before, and when I went out for the third time, I wanted to test the old theory that cats always land on their feet.

"So, when I picked this cat up, I tossed him down, only to discover he'd latched his claws into my coat. I never did find out if he could have landed on his feet.

"I guess I'll have to wait for another time."

DCCCS President Howard May Quit

Bylaws Change Urged

The Rev. Raymond Howard has indicated he will resign as president of the board of directors of the embattled Daly City Community for Children's Services.

Mrs. Dorothy Howard, the Reverend Howard's wife, also is expected to step down soon as a member of the day care corporation's board of directors.

The Reverend Howard could not be reached at press time for comment, and Mrs. Howard declined to comment "right now" on the matter.

The resignation of the Howards is expected to stem some of the criticism of the day care organization by Daly City and San Mateo County officials, as well as disgruntled parents.

The criticism, which has been simmering since Howard fired center director Ann Cooper for "insubordination" in January, came to a head more than a week ago.

A fiscal audit and program review, undertaken by the city and the county, was released June 3. The program review noted that certain state monies had been incorrectly transferred into the center's operating account.

The state monies, allocated to DCCCS for day care reimbursement at locations other than the DCCCS-operated center, could not be used for center operations. The bulk of the funds will be returned to the state's general fund.

The city-county program review cited bad management practices by the DCCCS Board of Directors as the impetus for problems in handling the state funds.

The Howards' plans to resign surfaced Monday night at a meeting of the Daly City Council.

Councilman Anthony Giammona, who along with Mayor Albert Teglia served on the audit review panel June 3, said he had met Monday with Howard.

Giammona recommended that the council release $6,000 in city reve-

Broadmoor Pact Delayed

Fight Between Factions Heats

By NANCY STANCILL

The battle is heating up between Broadmoor residents who want a Daly City police services contract and those who don't.

The informational packet for the Daly City Council Monday night contained copies of 57 letters from Broadmoor residents who support the proposed seven to 10-year police protection pact with Daly City.

But opponents say that about 800 residents have signed a petition asking the Daly City Council not to sign a contract with the Broadmoor Police Commission.

Representatives of both sides showed up Monday at the City Council meeting to plead their cases, but the council postponed the contract matter until a special meeting, June 20.

City Atty. Albert Polonsky said the proposed contract was not complete and suggested that the council wait a week to consider it.

The contract proposal, as outlined to the Police Commission by Daly City Manager David Rowe, would accept Broadmoor's seven police personnel as city employes, not necessarily in the Daly City Police Department.

The proposal, approved by the Broadmoor commission in May, would tax Broadmoor property-owners $1.06 per $100 of assessed valuation to start, and would not escalate to more than $1.20 during the life of the contract.

Currently, Broadmoor residents are being served by the Daly City Police Department under a temporary police services contract, due to expire July 1.

The temporary contract went into effect Jan. 1, 1976, when the Broadmoor Police Commission was unable to get liability insurance after the Police Department's existing coverage was cancelled.

The issue of insurance coverage is expected to come up again before the Broadmoor Police Commission at its regular meeting Tuesday night.

Commissioner Wayne Johnson is expected to ask that the commission approve a $24,500 a year liability insurance offer by Foster City agent Greg Commaroto. The offer has been turned down several times in the past because the other two police commissioners, John McCloskey and Dean Davenport, have declined to go along with it.

However, Johnson said Monday he now has a written proposal from Comaroto. He also said Davenport presumably has a registered letter from the agent.

McCloskey and Davenport had said their objections to the insurance proposal were based partially on the fact they didn't have an offer in writing.

The commission also is expected to discuss contingency plans in case an agreement on police protection is not reached by July 1. The temporary contract with Daly City ends June 30.

Johnson said Monday the county Sheriff's Office would be obliged to provide protectin to Broadmoor's more than 7,000 residents if nothing else is available.

He said, however, that such coverage would be "minimal."

Daly City Told It's Not Spending Fast Enough

The federal government wants Daly City to spend money faster.

"There is a concern on the part of the Department of Housing and Urban Development about the speed at which Daly City is expending Housing and Community Development Act funds," said Don Fleming, Daly City's Community Development Director.

Daly City has received about $650,000 in two years of HCDA funding and only has spent about 25 per cent of it, Fleming explained.

Because of HUD's concern that the funds "are not going into the community rapidly enough," Fleming is coordinating a task force to implement funding.

City Manager David Rowe has appointed three city personnel to work full time for the next 10 to 12 weeks on the task force, and five others to spend 30 per cent of their time on the project.

Working fulltime on the task force will be Betty Clark and Fred DeJarlais of the Community Development Department and Ed Thomasello of the Department of Parks, Recreation and Maintenance.

Fleming, along with Library Director Sam Chandler, Finance Director Robert Green, Community Services Director Alice Gonzales and City Planner Thomas Miller, will be working part-time.

The task force will work out of a basement office in the Civic Center and will be assisted by a policy advisory task force composed of two City Council members, as well as by several other city board appointees.

Fleming said getting implementation underway is a common problem among localities receiving HCDA monies.

The task force's main priorities will be location of a site for a proposed multipurpose center, planning improvements for the city's community service center, working with housing rehabilitation proposals and developing improvements to Hillside and Bayshore city parks.

"Things are starting to get rolling already," Fleming said of the last few months.

Rowe pointed out that the city general plan and redevelopment proposals are being completed and now is an opportune time for work on HCDA programs.

Chapters of AFT Combine

By TERRY DAVENPORT

Believing that teachers must band together to reap the full benefits of collective bargaining, six local chapters of the American Federation of Teachers have unified to create a North County AFT council.

AFT groups that announced the pact are from San Bruno (AFT Local No. 2220), South San Francisco (Local No. 1119), San Mateo Community Colleges (Local No. 1493), Laguna Salada (Local No. 3276), Jefferson Union High School District (Local No. 1481) and Jefferson Elementary School District (Local No. 3267).

The six groups elected Mary Ballard of Jefferson

Daly City Residents Ask Faster Action

A Step Forward for Redevelopment

Persons eager to fix up old homes in Daly City are disappointed that the city is not moving faster to make federal rehabilitation loans available, two residents told the Daly City Council Monday night.

The council took action to appoint a rehabilitation bond counsel Monday, but Conrad Pavellas and Ernie Pezzola of the Old Daly City Protective Association (ODCPA) said the action hasn't been prompt enough.

Pavellas noted that the 19 residents of the Vista Grande and a Crocker areas of the city were told last fall that funds were imminent for the long-awaited program.

City Manager David Rowe said the delays stem from the fact that use of Housing and Community Development Act monies for loans through the city is complicated and involves many "legal intricacies."

"We want to hire the bond counsel to tell us when and how we can obtain the authority to go into the banking business," Rowe explained.

City Atty. Albert Polonsky recommended the city retain the firm of Orrick, Herrington, Rowley and Sutcliffe to handle up to $1 million in loan monies at a the city and the Daly City Scavenger Co.

• Voted to retain a consultant's opinion on whether Vista Grande Cablevision should be allowed to drop Channel 8 — a Salinas station. The $400 cost will be split with Pacifica.

• Appointed Jim Alegre as Daly City representative to the San Mateo County Equal Opportunity Commission.

Jeff Elementary Hires Aide

The Jefferson Elementary School Distriuct Governing Board Monday approved a contract to hire Dr. Larry Lyon as assistant superintendent of education services.

Lyon, who received his doctorate and credential for administrative services from the University of Southern California, has a four-year contract with the district beginning July 5, 1977.

His annual salary has been set at $29,831, including an auto allowance and additional compensation for an advanced degree.

Lyon, 39, will be replacing Dr. Jerry Houseman who left the district Oct. 15, 1976. Lyon currently is principal of Madera School in the Simi Valley.

In a special session held prior to the board meeting, the trustees agreed to pay only 63 of the 91 days liquidation damage charges demanded by Michael Blach, general contractor for the Fernando Rivera Gymnasium. The damages the trustees have agreed to pay total some $9,590.

Following the special session the meeting had to be moved to Fernando Rivera School to accomodate the more than 200 teachers who showed up to protest the board's plan to hold a five-day in-service training session from June 20 to 24.

Representatives from several schools read specially prepared statements listing the number of hours each of their faculties have already spent in in-service training.

Attributions such as dehumanizing, punitive, vindictive and illegal were applied to the board's unpopularly planned workshops.

A special meeting was held Tuesday to determine what action the Jefferson Classroom Teachers Association will take as a result of the board's refusal to change their minds about the five-day workshop.

Pacificans Jump Into 'Our Town' Session

By TERRY DAVENPORT

Pacifica residents left an eight-hour idea swapping session on the city's general plan with smiles on their faces.

All five City Council members, the police chief, fire chief, city manager, assistant city manager, Chamber of Commence president and city department heads sat in small groups with other Pacifica citizens Satuday and enthusiastically discussed what Pacifica might be.

"Most of us seemed to be talking about Pacifica as a whole, even though our group had a representative from every neighborhood. I found it a very unique experience,," said Marc Elliot.

The all-day conference was engineered by Robert Ironside, whose company, Ironside and Associates, was hired last month to revise the general plan over a 14-month period.

Ironside's method involves maximum input from Pacifica citizens and he said he intends to hold three more citywide workshops.

The 125 Pacificans attending the meeting were randomly divided up into discussion groups according to the colors on their name tags. Each group was asked to voice opinions on questions posed in a 20-page workbook that was distributed in advance. To make sure that all points were covered, Ironside gave each group a different starting page in the book.

At the end of the day, eah group reported back to the main assembly on decisions it had reached, then turned in a written report to Ironside.

"I'll bet you were surprised at how much you were able to accomplish," Ironside said.

There were nods of agreement. The seven groups ran through most issues likely to effect Pacifica's future.

Although the city is well known for its outspoken neighborhood groups and stormy City Council meetings, Pacificans reached accord on a number of items.

• Light industry and commercial recreation should be attracted to Paifica said Donna Starr, a member of the "green" group, "We all agreed that Pacifica has been through its adolescence and is now approaching its adulthood, and that the time has come for Pacifica to earn its own living financially."

• The "obstacle course" that developers and residents must run through at City Hall in trying to get their building plans approved should be simplified, or at least explained step by step.

• Higher priority should be given to improving the north-south traffic route through the city than to east-west access.

• The city should inform citizens what to do in case of earthquakes.

• Beaches should have better access. Several groups proposed installing parking meters in lots near beaches and using the funds earned from them to maintain the beaches.

• Pacifica's character, historic sites and environment should be protected at all costs.

• Noise ordinances should be enacted. Fairmont neighborhood residents have a particular problem with airplane noise.

• Public transportation should be improved. Two groups pointed out that cars may prove to be impractical within the next 10 years.

• Some curbs must be made on population growth.

• Hiking trails and bike lanes should be developed. Reporting for the "white" group, Councilman Mark Savage said, "You ought to be able to walk from one end of Pacifica to the other."

• A Devil's Slide bypass should be constructed.

• Developers should be required to provide enough garages to prevent parking cars on the street. The "gold" group pointed to the Terra Nova Townhouses as an example of a development that provides insufficient parking. The "red" group noted that street sweepers can't clean the streets when cars are parked on them.

The "red" group was emphatic about the need for providing an incentive for homeowners to improve their property. They said Absentee landlords are a growing problem. "You can walk down my street and pick out the rental homes — they're rundown," said Shirley Drye.

The group decided homeowners should be required to maintan their homes whether they reside in them or not.

The "red" group also said shopping centers should be required to improve their appearance and should be encouraged to provide such services as child care. The "white" group proposed European style shopping centers — ones that are smaller and located in more neighborhoods.

Commuter parking was a touchy point with the "gold" group. They complained that mass transportation builders have not planned adequate parking facilities for commuters, with the result that parked cars are clogging areas near BART and SamTrans junctions.

The "green" group came up with some ideas for economic development in Pacifica, including high quality restaurants, a performing arts center, a trout farm, zoological or horticultural gardens, and facilities for riding, bowling, skating, swimming and other sports.

members of the "gold" group proposed a conference center that would attract outside business groups and, at the same time, would be a facility for the city's performing arts.

The "white" group suggested coming up with a list of historical houses and giving copies to real estate personnel, in order to attract buyers who would fix up the homes rather than destroy them.

Finally, the "gold" group had a solution that would help all Pacifica citizens: a City Hall ombudsman.

No Change Proposed in SSF Tax Rate

A proposed $9.7 million 1977-78 budget was presented to the South San Francisco City Council Monday afternoon.

City Manager Walter Birkelo gave members of the council the first of four budget volumes, dealing primarily with revenues and general government expenses.

The proposed budget is 2 per cent higher than what the council approved for 1976-77. Birkelo has suggested that no change in the general fund tax rate of $1 per $100 of assessed valuation be made.

Birkelo's proposal indicates the city can expect to receive about 5.4 per cent more revenues for the 1977-78 fiscal year than were received last year.

"The principal area of increased revenues is other than property taxes, which reflects a substantial growth in sales tax activity," he said.

Birkelo said property tax revenues are estimated to increase 5.45 per cent, a rate of growth less than the general valuation increase announced by the county assessor.

"The requested 1977-78 expenditures total $9,711,923, an increase of 2.03 per cent over the 1976-77 approved amount, not taking into account probable expenditures for salary adjustments arising out of existing labor agreements and those currently being negotiated," Birkelo said.

"However," he added, "the budget does provide $344,247 as a reserve for such an expense, although the precise amount cannot be determined at this time."

Birkelo told the council that the budget represents a "hold-the-line" attitude.

"One position has been deleted and two positions added in the personal services area," he said. "Non-personal expense has been rigorously scrutinized and pared, to what I believe to be, a minimal operating level. On balance, the budget should permit the residents of South San Francisco to enjoy the same general level of services without the imposition of any major new revenue sources."

Total estimated revenues for 1977-78 total $10,056,170, Birkelo told the council. Although property tax revenues, due to the county's increase in assessed valuation, will increase, Birkelo said this will be offset by lesser amounts of gas tax and general revenue sharing funds estimated for transfer to the city's general fund.

In estimated revenues, Birkelo said the city can expect to receive $3,148,600 from property taxes and $4,168,200 from all other taxes, by far the two largest revenue producing categories.

The city's largest single expenditure is for police services, estimated to run $2,812,175. fire expenditures are estimated at $2,449,805. The next largest general fund operating expentitures are in the areas of public service ($1,640,201), which includes engineering, public works and building inspection, and park and recreation ($1,318,028).

Birkelo promised the council three additional budget volumes, to be presented prior to budget study sessions.

Following Birkelo's presentation, the city's director of finance, Bill Andersen, led the council through a two-hour study of the first volume's 171 pages.

AFT

High's AFT as president of the council.

"Our purpose is to consolidate AFT organizing and political efforts to advance the interests of teachers in San Mateo County, and to promote effective learning and teaching conditions," said Mrs. Ballard.

She pointed out that school management representatives have already banded together. "Now, teachers are getting together," she said.

Mrs. Ballard remarked that the recent contract negotiated for South San Francisco teachers was one reason for the council's formation.

"That contract didn't even negotiate a grievance procedure. Any contract that isn't in the interest of teachers is of no help to them," Mrs. Ballard commented. The South San Francisco contract was negotiated by the California Teachers Association.

Asked if the recent attempt by Teamsters Local No. 856 to organize teachers in the South San Francisco Unified and Jefferson Elementary school districts had anything to do with the council's existence, Mrs. Ballard replied, "The fact that Local 856 of the Teamsters is in those districts attempting to organize teachers tells you that hopelessness and fear exist in those districts, because, in my judgment, teachers do not identify with someone like Rudy Tham, unless they feel they ain't got no other place to go.

"We want teachers to know they have the best alternative available and that the best place to go is the AFT."

Tham spearheaded local efforts to interest teachers in joining the Teamsters.

"In a way, I think we should thank the Teamsters for bringing us together," said Mrs. Ballard.

She added that the AFT will continue to invite a merger with the CTA.

Among the council's specific goals are equitable salary benefits, better fringe benefits, hiring rights for temporary teachers, early retirement programs, educational retraining at the district's expense, a strong grievance procedure, a student discipline policy with teeth, extra pay for additional duties such as coaching, duty-free preparation periods for all teachers, an evaluation of tenure teachers every four years and health and safety provision for teachers.

nue sharing monies as a result of the meeting with Howard.

"The $6,000 will carry them (the DCCCS) through June 30, and I'm sure something will happen between now and then," Glammona told the council.

When questioned later, Glammona said the Reverend Howard had informed him of his intent to resign.

The council decided unanimously to release the $6,000 portion of a $12,900 revenue sharing allocation it had promised the DCCCS in march. At that time, the City Council had told the DCCCS board to rewrite its bylaws in order to continue to be funded by Daly City.

The DCCCS' operating funds are almost depleted.

The city has funded the DCCCS in excess of $131,000 in revenue sharing and Housing and Community Development Act monies, while the county has expended $16,160 in revenue sharing to date.

City and county officials have continued to prod the DCCCS Board of Directors to revise its bylaws, do away with some board powers and create a strong administrator to handle some of the board's present duties.

The program review recommended continuation of the day care center with the following options:

• Make continued funding contingent upon satisfactory compliance with organizational reforms.

• That the city assume temporary direct administration until another corporate sponsor can be organized to take over direct operations.

• Invite bids from competing organizations to utilize the city's facility (350 Lowell Street) to continue child day care services.

Revenue Sharing to Help Cut Tax Rate

In a special session, Daly City's City Council voted to allocate about $266,000 of its revenue sharing money to general municipal operations.

The move Saturday by the council could lower the city tax rate by 10 cents in the upcoming fiscal year. The action was viewed as part of the council's effort to bring the tax rate from its present $1.99 per $100 of assessed valuation to a proposed $1.50.

The council also voted $100,000 in revenue sharing to health and social services to be provided by the city, and an additional $50,000 to be used for health and social services by contract.

City Manager David Rowe has recommended about $100,000 for capital outlay, but the council deferred action on that area of revenue sharing.

Beware the House-sitter

By JOHN HORGAN

There are any number of awful curses which should not befall the confirmed suburbanite.

You should never have to sup your gruel next to a Little League team which is suffering from a Big Mac attack.

You ought to remain free from all re-runs of Donny and Marie and the rest of the Osmond Family.

And you should not have to wait in Lucky's checkout line behind a 300-pound hussy in curlers and stretch pants, with tattoos of Haystack Calhoun covering her biceps.

Suburbia has many pitfalls. I know these may sound like little things to you, but they have a way of building up.

But I have discovered there is yet one more plague which must be avoided at all costs: the dreaded hex of the housesitter.

Beware of this one by all means.

Watch out for the housesitter. He or she can wreak unforeseen havoc on your tender manse if you aren't careful.

The housesitter is not a rare breed at all. This practice of taking care of a home while the owners are away is becoming quite common. You can find ads to this effect in most papers up and down the Peninsula.

But don't leap into one of these marriages of convenience on a whim. Don't entrust your split-level gem to just anyone.

Consider what happened last month to a well-meaning Burlingame couple.

They wanted to take a trip. But they didn't want to leave their house alone. They needed a housesitter. So they asked a friend from San Francisco to take over for a while.

That was their big mistake.

Their friend — let's call her Lucretia — had only the best of intentions. She really did. It was just that the house proved to be too much for her.

Lucretia had been at the house for only a few days when things started to go wrong.

Perhaps her most memorable encounter involved the garbage disposal.

After a pleasant evening meal, she discovered that the contraption wasn't working right. She got the hint when portions of dinner began to reappear there in the kitchen sink.

Lucretia began telephoning friends for assistance. She made the mistake of calling me. When I got there and saw the situation I cried a lot and short-circuited the entire kitchen.

We stood there together clutching a plumber's helper, our hands immersed in dirty water and debris.

"Lucretia," I whispered into her ear, "we can't go on meeting like this."

"Shut up and pump the plunger," she hissed back.

So much for levity.

Lucretia got nowhere with the drain. Neither did I. Neither did Dave, another fellow who was called over. Even Roto Rooter had trouble out there.

The house just seemed to be having its way with everyone. It didn't take kindly to having unfamiliar hands on board.

Lucretia had other troubles with the place, but her main event came with the disposal.

The final tally: House 1, Housesitter 0.

When the owners finally returned, they did the only smart thing. They snapped on their TV set to watch a re-run of Donny and Marie.

As they did so, the garbage disposal came to life.

Lucretia scores again.

Pacifican Wants To Volunteer— He May Sue City

By TERRY DAVENPORT

Bob Plaskon wants to sue somebody.

The 28-year-old Pacifica resident intends to take legal action against the state, the City of Pacifica or Pacifica's Emergency Services department — possibly all three.

Plaskon is angry because Pacifica won't allow him to be a volunteer in Emergency Services, the department responsible for coordinating city services during rises such as earthquakes or floods.

New regulations enacted within the last month expressly forbid the use of volunteers who have infirmities.

Plaskon has been handicapped and completely bedridden since 1969, when he was injured while working out with a gymnastics team in the Army. He believes the new rules are aimed at him.

The irony is that Plaskon served as a volunteer in the Citizens Band division of Emergency Services for 3½ years, working nights and often days, using equipment in his home. It wasn't until April 20 that he resigned in a dispute over the way the department is operated.

Plaskon wrote a letter to the department's deputy director, Rosemary Cameron, complaining about the lack of a newsletter, urging more direction for new members and more communication between volunteers in the CB division, and arguing that the department was misusing volunteers by having them check for burned out streetlights and cars parked on the wrong side of the street.

"Those are jobs of the Police Department and City Works," Plaskon pointed out.

He wrote that he was resigning with reservations and would be back if the department improved.

Plaskon said he resigned because, "I had written letters before and they never got acted upon. I felt this was the only way to get something done."

About three weeks ago, Plaskon believed some improvements had been made and reapplied to be an Emergency Services volunteer.

He was startled to learn that he no longer is wanted.

He cried for the first time in 11 years when Mrs. Cameron told him his application had been turned down.

"I fought for my country, so why can't I fight for my community and why, after doing exactly that for 3½ years, are they now telling me I'm not good enough?,, asked Plaskon.

Mrs. Cameron explained that she, City Manager Don Weidner and Police Chief Melvin Nelson decided to put together an administrative order for Emergency Services "two or three months ago."

"We have been trying to get many things in the city organized. We felt very strongly it was necessary to have some standards for the department. We prepared the rules and regulations.

"Unfortunately, Mr. Plaskon resigned in the interim and reapplied under a new set of circumstances. I feel I had no choice in the matter," said Mrs. Cameron.

According to Mrs. Cameron, the new regulations were jointly adopted, signed by the city manager and put into effect about one month ago. She said all city departments are required to have similar sets of operating procedures.

Plaskon mailed a letter to the Pacifica City Council last Thursday. "I told them about the inconsiderate people who crushed me," he said.

In the letter, Plaskon lists his qualifications for being an Emergency Services volunteer.

His main argument is his past and present service to voluntary organizations. Dozens of plaques and trophies in his home attest to his community involvement.

Plaskon is a member of the Affiliated League of Emergency Radio Teams and Radio Emergency Associated Citizens Team. Within the last 3½ years, he claims, he has logged more than 2,000 emergency calls.

He belongs to the American Law Enforcement Association and the Police Academy.

Charges Lodged Against Couple

Pacifica police have arrested a San Francisco couple, charging them with a total of 31 counts of residential burglaries.

The burglaries had been plaguing Pacifica police for the past two weeks.

Arrested were Richard E. Hocking, 40, and Lisa Ann Fradella, 19. Both listed their address as the Lafayette Hotel in San Francisco.

Hocking has been charged with 24 counts of residential burglary and Miss Fradella has been charged with seven counts.

According to Sgt. Tony Conte, the arresting officer, the pair are suspected of committing a series of burglaries in Pacifica over the past two weeks. In each case, he said, the handle of the front door of the residence was ripped off to allow entry.

At about 2:30 p.m. Friday, the two suspects were allegedly observed burglarizing a home. An alert neighbor, police said, jotted down their automobile license plate number and a description of the vehicle, then alerted police.

Day Care Will Continue Despite DC Controversy

What lies in the future for the Daly City Community for Children's Services?

One thing seems certain — government - funded day care will continue in Daly City.

The theme that emerged from last Friday's hearing on the program review and fiscal audit of the DCCCS was two-fold — that day care services should be available in Daly City and that perhaps the DCCCS corporation shouldn't be the organization to provide it.

"One of the strengths of the DCCCS staff manifested in its early stages was its ability to document and describe the need for low-cost day care for working mothers in Daly City," the program review said.

"Independent data suggests day care needs are increasing," it continued. "We therefore recommend that publicly assisted day care for children of low income parents be continued.

"The day care center, which is the subject of this audit, should continue as a community-based operation with Daly City continuing a strong overview role until the operation has been fully stabilized," the report concluded.

The problems that have plagued the DCCCS from the beginning — the inability of the board of directors to work effectively with participating parents, the board's failure to delegate administrative responsibilities to a center director and its inflexibility to city and county demands for change — are cited by county officials.

The same problems are the reason the DCCCS failed to administer properly the state vendor monies, Stephen Graham, the county's senior planner for social services, said.

"It was difficult for them (the DCCCS) to make cooperative arrangements with other agencies and day care providers because of their reputation," said Graham. "They did not have adequate outreach."

Don Heath, San Mateo County's community planning director, is doubtful that the DCCCS board can continue to administer day care.

"The most pervasive problem is that it still has not taken enough steps to correct its serious management deficits," he said.

Pacifica Girl Begins to Respond

A 15-year-old Pacifica girl, in a coma for the past three months, is beginning to react to voice commands, according to Dr. Theodore Baiz, a neurological surgeon.

The girl, Jeanine Battaion, a student at Terra Nova High School, has been in a comatose state since a March 12 freeway accident.

Dr. Baiz, using sharp commands, has succeeded in getting the girl to blink her eyes, squeeze her fingers and wriggle her toes on the right side of her body.

Miss Battaion is at Hillsdale Manor convalescent hospital in San Mateo, but may be moved to a center for rehabilitation care if her condition continues to improve.

A "Jeanine Battaion Fund" in Pacifica has thus far raised approximately $11,000 for the girl's treatment.

Deadline Given SSF On Leaks

South San Francisco officials have until today to devise a plan to permantently correct a leak which discharged 400,000 gallons of raw sewage into San Francisco Bay last week.

Regional Water Quality Control Board Executive Officer Fred Dierker said he signed an order this week that requires the North County city to stop the sewage discharge immediately.

It also asks the city to come up with plans and specifications for redesign of the pipeline.

"I might very well decide to bring it to the board for an enforcement hearing to consider the possibility of fines," Dierker said.

Water quality officials learned of South San Francisco's sewer line break last week through the media.

It is expected, Dierker said, that such problems would be reported immediately by local authorities to the WQCB.

The city, he said, actually violated its permits for sewage outfall on San Francisco Bay by not reporting the incident to WQCB officials.

Fines for such an incident, he pointed out, could range up to $10,000 a day. The WQCB would have to determine if the mishap was serious enough to warrant fines and the amount of the fine would be determined in court, Dierker said.

If the matter is brought before the board, it probably wouldn't be until sometime in July, he said.

'Hostage' Situation Resolved

San Bruno officers feared last Thursday that they were confronted with a hostage situation when a Sacramento man held his estranged wife at her sister's house, allegedly against her will.

The incident at 11:30 a.m. ended quietly, however, when police arrested Edmund Ogaz, 21, of Sacramento and his 16-year-old brother, charging them with kidnap and assault with a deadly weapon.

Officers Joe Lanthier and Bill Rodenspiel were called to 559 E. San Bruno Ave. regarding a possible kidnap-hostage situation.

They were told by a neighbor that Lillian Ogaz, 19, of Sacramento, was being held there against her will by her husband.

As the police entered the rear of the building, the home of Mrs. Ogaz's sister, a detective watched at the front.

The two suspects and Mrs. Ogaz then walked out the front of the house, and Ogaz and his brother were apprehended.

The two suspects allegedly dragged Mrs. Ogaz from her home in Sacramento after Ogaz demanded custody of their three children. The woman told police she suggested they drive to San Bruno to talk things over at her sister's house.

Sacramento police authorities drove to San Bruno in the afternoon to take the suspects into custody

Mental Health Association Pledges Probe Cooperation

By VERA GRAHAM

While the Mental Health Association of San Mateo County emphasized it will continue to fight for an outside, unbiased probe of the county mental health services, it says it will work cooperatively with the Mental Health Advisory Board, the overseeing citizen agency for the department.

This was made clear following a meeting last Wednesday of the Mental Health Advisory Board and issuance of a joint statement by President Marian Hilpisch and Executive Lowell Streiker of the Mental Health Association.

The agency will press its appeal for a $100,000 allocation before the county Board of Supervisors. The advisory board majority is opposed to the expenditure and calling in of outside experts, preferring an in-house examination. The Mental Health Association says it can't accept evaluations from the same staff operating the program.

There is, however, unanimous agreement that the system needs an overhaul to determine what programs are reaching people, who is being underserved and who is not getting needed help.

The board, after extensive discussion, passed the following resolution which will go to the supervisors:

"The Mental Health Advisory Board shares the San Mateo County Mental Health Association's concerns regarding delivery of mental health services in San Mateo County.

"The Mental Health Advisory Board urges the cooperative formation of a joint committee paneled from among our respective groups.

"This committee will be charged with bringing directly to the Board of Supervisors facts concerning areas of underservice, nonservice or waste which presently saps our county service dollar.

"However, the Mental Health Advisory Board does not endorse the need for an outside consultant, but favors an in-house review."

It was agreed the board's executive committee will meet with the association's representatives to set up the investigative group.

Mrs. Hilpisch and Streiker who attended the meeting said the reason no one from the association had attended last month's board session which voted against spending $100,000 for an outside consultant, was that they had been asked not to attend, to let the board first review the report.

Chairman Anthony Hoffman said such could not be the case, that as a public body, the board's meetings are open and cannot be legally closed to anyone wishing to attend.

Mrs. Hipisch said the result made the association "look very bad." She added, "I agree we should work together, but I can't see how we can with this kind of confusion."

Streiker said the resolution was an inadequate response to a document prepared by 50 representative task force members who worked for more than five months. It was headed by Robert Bills, an attorney, who also attended the Wednesday night meeting but did not speak.

Board member Harold Dickman said, "We agreed the questions you raised were appropriate and that we, too, were concerned about them. We were concerned about the tenor of the report, which seemed pejorative. We expressed our support of Dr. (Mike) Rankin (program chief of the mental health division)." Dickman and board member Stuart L. Scott drafted the resolution for submission to the board. He said a cooperative effort is needed to review the association's facts and figures.

Mrs. Hilpisch said the board's failure to support the outside study "emasculates our whole report." However, both she and Streiker agreed that there is need for a cooperative effort in the same direction.

Board member Arden Weinberg asked if failure to support the outside study indicated "If we don't go along with it, forget it?"

Mrs. Hilpisch and Streiker said absolutely not.

Mrs. Weinberg noted, "Then it opens the door to allow us to examine the report in detail."

One board member commented the association had gone directly to the supervisors, in effect bypassing the board. But Streiker emphasized the board and mental health division had representatives on the task force.

The joint statement by Mrs. Hilpisch and Streiker has emphasized there is disappointment over the brief resolution response to the critical study of the mental health services situation. It was noted, "After all, we are not the first observers who have called attention to the inadequacies of this county's mental health system."

It was recalled that similar criticism was made by the state auditor general two years ago. Howvever, he put the responsibility on the state health department.

The statement emphasizes the board and association have mutual concerns and goals, that the association, though also eager to support Dr. Rankin in his effort to reorganize the programs and division, still is calling for an independent review of the county's mental health system as long overdue.

The association is not an adversary, but advocacy agency, whose purpose is to serve "people who are hurting 'out here.'" The statement adds that despite the association's willingness to support Rankin, it will continue to insist on an outside, unbiased probe. It agrees both bodies want the same high quality care for the mentally ill.

It is further noted, "It is the heartfelt conviction of the Mental Health Association that $100,000 is a small investment for cost-effectiveness and quality in the delivery of mental health services currently budgeted at more than $12 million."

The association again urges the budget be frozen at that figure this year.

Teachers Approve Pact in Laguna

Teachers in the Laguna Salada Educational Association gave their stamp of approval Friday to the proposed teachers' contract that came out of negotiations between their organization and the Laguna Salada Union School District.

LSEA members voted 195 to 65 to accept the contract. Polling was conducted at individual schools in the district.

Teachers indicated they were most pleased about the binding arbitration clause in the contract. They had hoped for a larger salary increase than the 3 per cent boost given in the contract. The teachers, who are among the lowest paid in the county, had originally asked for an 8 per cent increase in wages.

Since the district ratified the contract on Thursday, it has now been ratified by both sides and will go into effect as soon as it is signed at the next school board meeting.

Pacifica Proud of Reduction

It's official: Pacifica cut its water use by 37 per cent last month over the quantity used in May 1976.

Harlan Hill of the North Coast County Water District reports that citizens accomplished the significant water cutback without any penalties having to be enforced.

Mandatory rationing in Pacifica is 25 per cent.

"I'm very proud of Pacifica," Hill said.

Woman Sought in DC Slaying Surrenders in San Jose

A woman sought in the May 21 slaying of 39-year-old Anthony Glegg at 592 Schwerin St., Daly City, surrendered in San Jose Monday.

Daly City police said Rozzie Lee Jackson, 36, San Jose, had called a San Jose detective she knew and told him to come get her. She was arrested on a warrant issued out of Northern District Municipal Court, with bail set at $250,000.

A police spokesman said the woman allegedly had been with the victim the night of his death, although not at the scene when Clegg's body was discovered.

Lt. Bob Benedetti of the Colma Fire Department is at the wheel. In background is volunteer Ray Lencioni and Chief George Riccomi.

Referendum Call Begins

A petition calling for a citywide referendum on the controversial K-Mart complex to be developed on El Camino Real is circulating in Colma.

The petition, circulated by resident Domenic Martini, apparently contains close to 50 signatures. Martini could not be reached for comment.

That's almost enough signatures to require the Colma City Council to call for a referendum to consider the development. The council approved the zoning change for the $3 million store, offices and 600-car parking lot in April.

By law, 25 per cent of the city's voters must petition for a referendum on a council action. According to City Clerk Frances Liston, Colma has 205 registered voters; so, 52 signatures would constitute 25 per cent.

It's Father's Day and we've got him covered from head to toe. Handsomely.

Just for fun, try this:

Of all the movies you have ever seen, pick the 10 that you liked best.

What would you select? "High Noon?" Writer Carl Foreman and director Fred Zinnemann took a rather undistinguished story and transformed it into one of the greatest westerns of all time. In it Gary Cooper personified the heroism found in an individual who stands for his principles regardless of the odds. Here was a Job-like character, dressed in black, who defied his wife, his friends and even the flat emptiness of the land to protect his town from four bandits. Such a theme is the warp and woof of great literature.

What musicals would you place on your list? "The Wizard of Oz?" "The Great Ziegfeld?" "My Fair Lady?" "Mary Poppins?" Americans loved them all. "Poppins" was nominated for 13 Oscars and won five. "My Fair Lady" cost $17 million to make. "Ziegfeld" has been called the most spectacular musical of the age, while "The Wizard of Oz" is known as the screens answer to the cartoon.

Would you place a cartoon film on your list? How about "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs?" It is known as the film that made the "breakthrough for animation, with its emphasis on images and movement, sound and color. " 'Snow White,' 'Pinocchio,' 'Bambi,' 'Dumbo,' 'Peter Pan' and 'Fantasia' all feature "almost surrealistic, depiction of demons, witches and evil spirits in mountainous hillscape."

Many of the films that appear as favorites are noteworthy because of the stars that made them. Who can forget "Top Hat" with Ginger Rogers and Fred Astaire? What's your favorite Humphrey Bogart movie? Joe Finler writes that "Casablanca" started a Bogart cult, "The Big Sleep" first teamed Bogart and Lauren Bacall and "The African Queen" made unusual demands upon special efforts and spectacular photography.

Lately the artistry of Clark Gable is being recognized more than ever before. What was your favorite Gable movie? "Gone With the Wind?" "San Francisco"? or "The Misfits"?

To help you compile your list, consult Joel W. Finler's "All Time Movie Favorites" (Longmeadow Press) with an introduction by Dustin Hoffman. Covering a period from the advent of movies to 1975, Finler has selected 200 of the screens greatest hits and presents them with over 250 illustrations as well as the stories behind their production.

"All Time Movie Favorites" tells of the problems that beset the makers of your favorite shows and of the techniques that directors, casts and crews used to capture your interest and give you a show that you'll never forget. It has been called a "comprehensive and fascinating survey." "All Time Movie Favorites" is fun to read.

County's Would-Be Queens Unveiled

By GEORGE GOLDING

The dozen girls who will compete for the "Dream Girl" title at the 1977 San Mateo County Fair and Floral Fiesta got together for the first time last week.

Meeting at the fairgrounds, they adjourned to the Royal Coach for a lunch with fair directors, reporters and photographers.

"Did your pageant have talent competition?" one girl asked another as they waited for latecomers to arrive.

"No, why?"

"Well, I was thinking of trying for Miss California, and they tell me you can't try for Miss California without some kind of talent."

Miss San Bruno, Diane Blankenship, a tiny blue-eyed blonde, said she is serious about the Miss California contest.

She grew up next door to a former "Miss Airport City," she said, and had always wanted to be a beauty contestant.

Still, when the time came, it was almost spur-of-the-moment.

"Someone told me, 'You should run;' so, I had my mother go downtown and get the application.

"I turned it in about half an hour before the deadline."

Deborah Bentley of San Mateo, another tiny blue-eyed blonde, said the same thing had happened to her.

"Ever since I was a little girl, I have always looked up to beauty pageants, but it really was a spur-of-the-moment decision to enter the Miss San Mateo contest."

A junior at Hillsdale, Deborah is at 17 the youngest girl in the contest, as well as one of the smallest.

"I was talked into entering," said Debra Ketcham, Miss Half Moon Bay.

A local businessman kept telling her she should compete, she said, so she finally went around to the contest to meet the other girls.

"They talked me into entering," she said, "and here I am."

"These girls are really nice," commented Manette Nispel, Miss Burlingame.

"I'm looking forward to this as a great experience." She already knew two of the girls, through clubs.

Others in the group previously knew each other, too. Miss Half Moon Bay, for example, had attended all of Miss San Bruno's contest rehearsals, with a mutual girl friend.

After lunch, and after a round of picture-taking at the hotel pool, the Fiesta group returned to the fairgrounds, where the girls changed into costumes and posed for pictures by professional photographer Norton Pearl.

Christine Osuna of South San Francisco donned a "South of the Border" costume that looked suspiciously Greek, and carried a guitar. She said it was so badly out of tune she could not play it.

Arnella Adams of Daly City became "Mexican" in a white see-through blouse and a flower in her hair.

Cynthia Charlton, a demure Miss Brisbane, became an equally demure Mission Miss with a flat red hat and white blouse with flower appliques.

Gayle McGinnis of Belmont wore flowers in her hair to offset the yellow of her blouse and a black skirt, and carried two maracas.

In keeping with the fair's "South of the Border" theme this year, Phyllis Loud of East Palo Alto posed in a black and white skirt and blouse with white lacy ruffles.

'Foreperson' Somehow Sounds Indecent

By NANCY STANCILL

In her varied career, Doris Thomasson has done everything from scrambling around rooftops to repairing leaks, to laying water and sewer lines.

So, she doesn't believe she's breaking much new ground as Daly City's first female maintenance foreman.

"I was doing this type of work long before women's liberation raised its head," she said seriously.

Mrs. Thomasson was appointed to the permanent position in March after serving as the city's temporary maintenance foreman since August.

She prefers the title maintenance "foreman" to the designation "forewoman" or "foreperson."

"They sound indecent," she smiled.

Mrs. Thomasson relaxed in her office on a recent afternoon after a fairly busy morning in the maintenance division.

A heavyset woman with long, flowing hair and penetrating blue eyes, she was dressed casually in slacks and a soft green shirt. Her modest office in the unadorned maintenance shed is located off the beaten track at the city corporation yard, Citrus and Niantic avenues.

She ticked off what the city maintenance division was doing that day.

"Let's see . . . the crew is changing lights at the Westlake Center, installing new hardware on Westmoor Clubhouse doors, working on the BART fence, doing inventory on all boilers and pressure tanks, replacing a gate at Gellert Park, repairing a tennis net at Arden Court . . .

"And this was not really a busy day," Mrs. Thomasson smiled.

Besides a staff of seven maintenance personnel, the new foreman supervises eight custodians who work three different shifts.

She said it's a challenge to schedule the work that must be fitted into the maintenance schedule.

"Our job essentially is to keep the city functioning — for the people who work in city facilities and for the public which uses them."

Mrs. Thomasson said maintenance, a division of the Recreation, Parks and Maintenance Department, "does a little bit of everything."

The division gets work orders from other city departments and receives numerous calls, asking such things as, "Are you the people who take care of locks and what should we do about the drapes?"

"The men really have to be jacks of all trades," she explained.

Mrs. Thomasson has not experienced any problems as a woman supervisor with an all-male crew.

"I have always worked with men, as a co-worker and a supervisor," she explained. "The only time I had a problem was in Missouri, when a contractor once refused to construct a sewer line because it was planned by a woman."

Mrs. Thomasson said she began working in a mostly-male environment when she and her husband started a land surveying and engineering firm in Missouri. For five years, she "ran crews and crawled up and down the hills of Missouri."

When she and her husband relocated to California seven years ago, Mrs. Thomasson had decided "to retire and stay home." Her husband had accepted a position as an engineer planner with the Naval Facilities Engineering Command in San Bruno.

But her "retirement" didn't last long.

"I found myself growing grouchy, miserable and gaining weight," she confessed.

Mrs. Thomasson tried secretarial work for a while, got bored and sought a more active job with the City of Daly City.

She was hired by the city four years ago as an engineering aide and worked in the area of street inspection.

Two years ago, she became the first woman construction inspector to be registered in the state, and since California was the first state to enact registration laws, she holds the same "first" for the nation.

Whe she found out about the maintenance foreman opening, she applied for it, took a battery of tests and was chosen over 20 other candidates.

"I wasn't sure I was really interested when I applied," she said. "But I didn't realize how challenging it would be. I'm enjoying it tremendously."

She is happy that the maintenance personnel have accepted her leadership. She thinks employe attitudes have been "outstanding."

"I'm not hesitant to ask their advice," she said of the personnel. "You hae to build on everyone's experience."

Mrs. Thomasson and her husband live near Redwood City.

When she's not working, "Would you believe I spend my spare time rebuilding a house?"

The couple also enjoys target shooting, as well as construction work.

Mrs. Thomasson is dubious about being spotlighted as a woman in a job generally filled by a man.

"If I succeed, it's because I enjoy my work," she said. "I would fail terribly if I just did it because I'm a woman."

Mrs. Thomasson said her husband and 18-year-old son are proud of her new opportunity, in much the same way.

"They're proud because they think I'm doing a good job, not because I'm a woman," she explained.

Our reasonably reliable though perhaps impeachable source tells us that Spec Richardson has raised the ire of at least several Giants by contracting the Giants with Adidas, the international sports shoe manufacturer, without first checking with players who have signed personal contracts with other shoe companies. This could lead to some interesting conflicts.

But shoes aren't the Giants' only problems. As this is written, the Giants are near the bottom of the NL in every offensive department, including having suffered more shutouts than any team in baseball, and being only ninth in the league in stolen bases.

Even when the Giants had their great power teams, they were generally two-three in the NL in the latter department. Add the fact that they have committed more errors than any team in baseball (there are no stats on mental errors, thank God), and have also hit into more doubleplays, and perhaps you can understand why they are eight games below the .500 mark (as this is written), despite the third best team ERA in the league, and the fifth best in baseball.

TO GIVE YOU an idea of how Giants' defense and thinking and inopportune hitting have hurt them, consider that they are now just about equal with the As in team batting and runs scored, and have an ERA of almost a full run a game lower than Oakland, yet Oakland is playing .500 baseball.

San Diego, at the moment, is the team which perhaps best personifies a major league ability to make the most of its offense. The Padres are ninth in the league in hitting, third in homeruns, yet have scored only four fewer runs than the Dodgers, who lead the league in virtually all offensive stats; which means the Padres have also scored more runs than any American League team.

BUT DON'T DISPAIR, Giants' fans. Now come the encouraging parts.

Consider that the Giants' low team ERA exists despite the fact of their ace, John Montefusco, first being off to a slow start and then injured; despite Ed Halicki's slow start; and despite Lynn McGlothen's slow start, probably because of a sore shoulder.

In other words, the staff has been held up by sensational relief pitching, which makes the Giants in that respect akin to the Yankees, who have been sorely disappointed in starters Catfish Hunter, Ken Holtzman, Mike Torrez and Don Gullett, but who have lived on relief work and have the lowest ERA in baseball. All odds are against Giants' starting pitching continuing to be so relatively ineffectual.

Likewise, all odds are against Bill Madlock continuing to hit into double plays — against so many physical and mental errors. The Giants are a young team which has endured a tremendous turnover in personnel. They have to get used to playing together. And their hitting has already picked up.

NOW CONSIDER that with all of the above, the Giants still aren't irretrievably out of the pennant race, or at least out of the running for second place. If they ever get their heads screwed on right-side-up this year, second place is still a reality.

Also don't disregard Italian Power. Joe Altobelli is one of the six Italians now managing in the big leagues (the others are Tom LaSorda, Dodgers; Herman Franks, Cubs; Joe Torre, Mets; Billy Martin, Yanks, and Frank Lucchesi, Texas), which means that we now represent 33 1/3 per cent of National League managements, and 23 per cent of all major league baseball. Front offices throughout the land MUST know something.

Speaking of the Giants' lack of stolen bases, the other side of the coin is Pirates, who under their new run-run manager Chuck Tanner, are currently stealing at about the same pace as the As did last year, when they shattered all modern base stealing records — under, remember, Chuck Tanner.

Oakland, incidentally, is still leading the AL in stolen bases, with the equally swift Angels hard on their heels.

Only nine teams averaged one stolen base a game in the period of 1926-75. Last year, FOUR clubs averaged at least an SB a game — the As, Kansas City, the Reds and the Yankees.

SORT OF ENCOURAGING — in a perverted way are the Giants' attendance figures. While they are last in the league, they HAVE out-drawn Baltimore (which leads the eastern division), Cleveland (on a big winning streak), Minnesota (leading the west) and Oakland, which is playing better ball than the Giants. They are also just barely behind Detroit.

Cincinnati and the Dodgers lead the majors in attendance, while K.C. leads the AL. Montreal has shown the most improvement in attendance over last year, while California has shown the best improvement in the AL. The Yankees are more off last year's attendance than any team in the game, while the Mets are most off in the NL.

All in all, the American League this year shows six teams improving attendance, six having gone down. Nine teams in the NL are up, three down.

IT'S INTERESTING, occasionally, to look through old copies of Sporting News and check out what happened on rumored trades. Speaking, as we were above of the Padres, in December they reportedly backed off on a trade of Butch Metzger for St. Louis' swift and hard-hitting center fielder Bake McBride. They were perhaps worried about McBride's off-season knee surgery. In the meantime, McBride is coming back strong and Metzger was disappointing enough to eventually be traded off for John D'Aquisto, at this point in his career doesn't have the reliability of McBride.

LOCAL NOTE: Meanwhile, the Giants were supposedly dickering with the Pirates for Jim Rooker, a solid, steady southpaw starter, and Richie Zisk, that right-handed power hitter they so sorely needed who is now tearing up the AL with the White Sox. The Giants were going to give up Ken Reitz, who they eventually traded for McGlothen, and Randy Moffitt. What do you think?

Going back to last season, the Giants, at one time or another, reportedly had lined up, in exchange for Willie Montenez, the Cardinals' sick fielding, heavy hitting local boy, Keith Hernandez, and the Dodgers' (he was then with Boston) Reggie Smith, who is having one of his greatest years switchhitting in the L.A. outfield. Westmoor's great lady basketball player, Lisa Maurino, has received a scholarship to play the game at USF next fall.

Maurino was Westmoor's MVP, made All League for two years, All County for two years and has been named to the first annual girls' North All-Star basketball team, for Region I and II.

SUDDEN THOUGHT: If you don't want your kid to be frustrated, discourage him from becoming a pitcher. Yes, the hours are good, but pitchers are also dependent on the ability of eight other players, whereas hitters are responsible only to themselves. Or need we remind you of what Mickey Owen did to Hugh Casey, as the most spectacular example? Relief pitchers are especially susceptible to poor team play, because they live by the save, and no matter how well they pitch, they can't get saves if the teams aren't winning.

SHE'S AN ALL-STAR (Times Photos by Mike Spinelli)

Lisa Eklof of Belmont, who had paced her Belmont Owls Little League team with a .667 average, was an All-Star selection. In the All-Star game, she went 1-for-2 and drew a walk. She was one reason the Owls won nine of their first 10 games, and started the second half of the season with a 4-0 mark.

Sugar, Spice, a Hot Bat

By GARRY NIVER

Three years ago, Lisa Eklof would have been just another young girl in pigtails attempting to think up "sugar and spice" things to occupy the very difficult transitional period that all 12-year-olds have to endure.

And the Belmont Owls of the Belmont AAA Little League would have been less of a baseball team because of that and, more importantly, Lisa probably would have been a frustrated youngster.

Prior to the 1976 Little League season, the antiquated body of adults which runs the national junior baseball organization relented under threatened court pressure and agreed to lift the edict which banned girls from Little League competition.

The rule change is one of the major reasons the Belmont Owls started the second half of their season in first place (4-0).

Meanwhile, Lisa was a member of the Belmont Little League National All-Star team, and went 1-for-2 with a walk.

Lisa had always been the tomboy type, running through the streets with the boys, chasing errant soccer balls and dribbling the basketball past the cracks in the playground pavement.

But her career in organized athletics seemed doomed until the Little League made its historic decision.

"It was a little difficult last season because it was the first year girls were allowed to play and I was the only girl in the league," admitted the Owls' all-star catcher, whose lofty .667 batting average leads the team.

"Last year I felt separated from everyone else because the boys felt a little strange over having a girl on the team. But this year," she beamed, "I'm just like one of the gang."

Owl manager Bob Domenichini concurs.

"I haven't had any conflicts at all," said the three-year veteran of the Little League wars. "If anything, the other managers are somewhat envious of me for landing her in the Little League draft."

Each year, prior to the season, all of the youngsters are put in a common pool, and the respective managers draft the players. This way no one club is allowed to build a dynasty over a period of years.

"We had her very high on our draft list because of her hustle and positive attitude," said Domenichini.

"Last year was Lisa's first year and she was just an average ballplayer. But in the tryouts this year you could see that she had improved by leaps and bounds."

Domenichini believes that Lisa's progression was a "will to want.

"As far as I'm concerned, "he commented, " she's proved herself way above and beyond. She gives me 120 per cent every day and she's never missed a practice."

Lisa, who credits batting coach Gary McCartey with her current hitting prominence, says she enjoys playing baseball with boys rather than girls because "the boys seem to have more hustle in this age category."

The Belmont youngster, who grew up near an uncle who played sports, switches her athletic talents to soccer when the baseball season is over. There she enjoys playing in a girls' league because the girls seem to "try harder in soccer."

Once this season is over, her Little League career will be over and she'll have to go to Babe Ruth play, which Domenichini envisions could be a problem for Lisa.

"From now on it's going to be tough," he pointed out. "Girls are accepted in Babe Ruth League ball, but none has ever played because they haven't been able to make the team. The requirements are like all-star play. But if anyone can do it, Lisa can."

She understands the challenge, but isn't that concerned about it right now. "I'll go to Babe Ruth and I'm confident that I'll do just as well there as I've done here.

"I possess a competitive spirit and the challenge of Babe Ruth baseball will make me try just that much harder," she said.

"One of my main goals in life is to become a real good baseball player."

Lisa, who lives with her mom, older sister, younger brother and four St. Bernards, would eventually like to become a veterinarian.

"The great thing about Lisa and this team is that there are no stars," noted Domenichini. "Take our pitching staff, for instance. Jim Robertson is 4-0, Mike McCartey is 3-1 and Paul Domenichini is 2-0.

"The big event for Lisa and the rest of the team is three weeks from now when we meet the Condors in a showdown for the league title."

And that hard-hitting catcher for the Owls will settle for nothing less than first place.

Records Tumble At GGF

Records involving mutuel handle tumbled during the 35-day thoroughbred season of the Tanforan Racing Association which ended Saturday at Golden Gate Fields.

Average daily handle totaled $1,447,701, which was the highest ever recorded by any thoroughbred racing association in Northern California.

Among the other Northern California records set during the Tanforan meet were money wagered during one week ($8,255,944) from May 30 to June 4, highest weekday handle ($1,592,097) on a non-holiday on June 10 and the largest Exacta ($2,656.55) and Daily Double $2,345.60) wagering pools on closing day, June 11.

In addition, Tanforan's biggest ever handle of $2,527,629 occurred on closing day, and ranks only behind the $3,017,424 wagered on California Derby Day at GGF as the highest single-day handles in Northern California history.

Attendance of 344,532 during the 35 days was the second highest in the history of Tanforan and averaged 9,844 per day, which was 1.2 per cent below the 1975 attendance during the Tanforan meet. Last year, Tanforan raced only 22 days due to labor problems. Attendance during a comparable 22-day period this year averaged 10,387 compared to 10,281 for 1976.

During the combined 92-day thoroughbred racing season of the Pacific and Tanforan Racing Associations this spring, attendance averaged 10,103, which was the second highest since 1964 and 2.1 per cent above 1975. Total attendance for the 92 racing days was 929,437. Average attendance for the 62 racing days at Albany last year was 10,193.

Dons Claim Crown in DC Basketball Play

The Serramonte Dons, upset in the first round of the playoffs, came back and defeated the Westmoor Long Bombers 57-50 to win the 1977 Winter High School Basketball League sponsored by the Daly City Recreation Department.

The Don's, who went undefeated in league play and had to be beaten twice in the playoffs, were upset by OLM in the first playoff game. OLM led by Kevin Lucido, 10 points, Mike Stack, 10 points, and Don Sheehan, nine points and 11 rebounds, defeated the Dons 44-36, despite a fine individual performance by Clarence Benjamin, who scored a game high 23. OLM pulled away in the second half by playing excellent defense and hitting 71 per cent from the floor.

IN THE OTHER playoff game of the night, the Westmoor Long Bombers defeated the Bromiers 80-64, despite Steve Riley's 27 points and 12 rebounds. The Bombers attack was led by five players in double figures. John Smith's 16 points was high for the Bombers, while Steve Chudzinski had 13 points, Don Clawson 12, Matt Vacurovich and Paul Papa George 10 each.

The semi-final game featured the high-scoring Bombers against the top defensive team, OLM. A strong second quarter put the Bombers on top to stay as they held off OLM for a narrow 37-34 victory. Paul Papa George led the Bombers with 11 points. OLM was led by Mike Stack and John Grealish, who scored 11 and 8, respectively. Grealish also hauled down a game high — 16 rebounds.

In the championship game, the Dons who finished first in league play, met the second place Bomber team. Their first meeting ended in an overtime victory for the Dons, the only defeat for the Bombers. Both teams shot poorly from the floor in the first half, but in the second half the Dons shot at a 44 per cent clip and this proved to be a deciding edge.

THE DONS shooting from the floor and key free throws helped them defeat the Bombers 57-50. Clarence Benjamin's 18 points, Bill Cade's 13 and Lathay McFadden's 16 rebounds led the way for the Dons. Don Clawson's 15 points and Paul Papa George's eight points led the Bombers.

It is "happy birthday" time at the Westlake Senior Citizens Club today.

Mrs. Milie Machens, president, reminds everyone that this is the day Mrs. Emily Pappas will be in charge of serving a special luncheon honoring those who will be celebrating birthdays during the next few weeks.

Mrs. Helen Corbett, thinking ahead to next Christmas, has issued an appeal for L'egg's containers and used, washed nylons. The egg shaped containers are used for a variety of things made for annual holiday boutique in Mary's Help Hospital and the nylons are transformed into appealing stuffed animals.

If you would like to make a donation, please leave your contributions in the hospital gift shop.

Mrs. Virginia Tierney and Mrs. Frances Lee were among those celebrating Shakespeare's birthday one recent afternoon.

The party, held at the University of California, was sponsored by the Northern Workshop of the Friends of California Libraries. Host unit was the Friends of the Berkeley Library.

Mrs. Tierney is the new president of the Friends of the Daly City Library and Mrs. Lee is just beginning her second term as corresponding secretary.

Sister Jeanenne of the St. Andrew's Community, is still accepting calls from persons wishing to make reservations for the Ecumenical Vietnamese Assistant Committee sponsored picnic.

Picnic goers will supply their own food and come equipped with suggestions and equipment for games. The event will be held on June 26 in Mitchell Park in Palo Alto.

"Volunteers are special people here for a special purpose," began Mrs. Mary McCoy during her tribute to the scores of volunteers who work under her direction at Mary's Help Hospital.

The comment was made at the annual awards and installation program held recently in the hospital solarium.

There would appear to be no shortage of special people in Daly City, for statistics provided by Mrs. McCoy show that each month 180 persons contribute volunteer hours amounting to 40,000 hours per year.

Should you be considering doing a little volunteer work, you might like to know that there is a need for help in such areas as patient contact on nursing floors, the admitting department, the clinic emergency room, EKG, flower delivery, gift cart, information desk, the library cart, mail delivery, nuclear medicine, occupational therapy, physical therapy and X-ray.

There is always room for more helpers in the boutique workshop, on the tray favor committee, in central supply, the gift shop, laboratory, library, offices or pharmacy. Volunteers man the Tele-care board, lead tours of the hospital, assist with the annual health fair, or assist with the monthly meeting for persons recovering from strokes.

Teen age helpers work in many of the same areas and participate in the various programs of the Northern Peninsula Junior Hospital Volunteers group. This past year the teens held an exchange day with the teen volunteers from Stanford Hospital.

Mrs. Millie Dunow, who takes care of the publicity for the Mary's Help Hospital Guild, indicated that new volunteers are always welcome and if you think you might be interested, contact Mrs. McCoy in the office of Director of Volunteer Services at Mary's Help Hospital.

Help Wanted

Handicapped children head the list of people who need volunteers to help them through agencies which have asked for assistance from the Volunteer Bureau/Voluntary Action Center of San Mateo County.

EASTER SEAL SOCIETY — Swimming aides to assist handicapped children on a one-to-one basis in classes which will be conducted at Burlingame High School in the afternoon for five weeks. Training will be given and the only requirements are the ability to swim and some knowledge of teaching.

TRI-CITY GIRL SCOUTS — A volunteer with a current first aid card to participate in a camping trip to Pescadero with 15 to 20 girls on June 19 through 24. The trip cannot be made without a woman volunteer.

SUICIDE PREVENTION AND CRISIS CENTER — A good typist to assist with a one-week project. Accuracy is important and the need is urgent.

VOCATIONAL REHABILITATION — A concerned volunteer to help a recently blinded man in career development. This will involve reading, assistance at the library, and possibly with interviews. The volunteer will be expected to help a few hours once or twice a week for about three weeks.

YWCA — Persons who enjoy working with children to supervise small groups in activities including theater arts, handcrafts, dance, music, games, sports and media. The traveling camp will have a different theme and activities each week and will be conducted in San Mateo for six weeks. Volunteers with a special knowledge or skill in one of the aforementioned areas also is needed to develop and implement her own programs.

EMERGENCY MEDICAL SERVICES — A volunteer for a short term project to put together a scrapbook of newspaper articles. Work may be done at home.

Students in the San Mateo Union High School District also may register for summer school community service with their school coordinator as well as the Volunteer Bureau.

League Offers Services

The League of Women Voters has offered its services to the Jefferson Elementary School District and its teachers in the form of a forum to express opinions on contract negotiations.

Elizabeth Daniels of the League's Northern San Mateo County chapter issued a letter for Betty Fleming, chapter president, offering the forum.

The district and teachers each would be allowed two spokesmen to present arguments under traditional forum rules of the league.

It would not be a debate, Mrs. Daniels cautioned, but simply a forum.

Teachers and the district have yet to reach a contract settlement for the 1976-77 school year.

Board President Alvin Schwarzbach said the district will consider the league's offer.

City Attorney Tired of Wait

Pacifica City Atty. Gloria Scheid urged the Pacifica City Council last Wednesday night to get on with its search for a new city attorney.

Ms. Scheid recently took a job as city attorney with the City of Vista in order to be closer to her new husband, who is city attorney for National City.

She agreed to stay on as Pacifica's city attorney until the city found a replacement and has been commuting between Southern California and Pacifica via jet in recent weeks.

But Wednesday Ms. Scheid wrote to the council, "I have agreed to spend the majority of my time in Vista, as of July 15."

Mayor Sidney Lorvan said her absence would begin to affect the council by its second meeting in July.

Meanwhile, council members are trying to decide whether to hire a full-time or a part-time city attorney to replace Ms. Scheid.

NELL NORTON

Good morning, good cooks.

June is such a busy month, with weddings, graduations and all sorts of party happenings, that it seems a good idea to feature more dessert ideas.

BEATRICE'S PINK ICE BOX CAKE

1 cup hot water
¼ cup lemon juice
Grated rind of two lemons
½ cup sugar
1 package raspberry flavored gelatin
1 can evaporated milk, large size
1 small flat tin crushed pineapple, drained
1 large package vanilla wafers, crushed
½ pint whipping cream

Dissolve the raspberry gelatin in the one cup hot water, add the fourth cup lemon juice, grated lemon rind and one-half cup sugar, and mix well. Place in refrigerator and chill until mixture just starts to set.

At the same time pour the large can of evaporated milk into the freezer tray and let chill until fine icy crystals begin to form around edges. Remove from tray and whip.

When the gelatin mixture starts to set, whip until thick and frothy and combine with whipped milk. Return to refrigerator to chill. At this time, whip the pint of cream.

Crumble the vanilla wafers. A nice, non-messy way to do this is to place the wafers in a plastic bag and roll with a rolling pin. If you have a blender, let it do the work.

Grease the bottom of a 10-inch spring form pan and put half the wafers on the bottom of the pan. Add half the gelatin mixture and then the rest of the crumbs, the layer of whipped cream, the well drained pineapple and top with the remaining gelatin mixture.

Let stand in the refrigerator overnight. If you wish to gild the lily, you may frost the cake with additional whipped cream.

Marina Foes Ready Drive

Opponents of South San Francisco's proposed Oyster Point Marina expansion this week began the legal procedures to force a citywide ballot measure that will determine the fate of the $8.4 million project.

Jim Keegan of the United Taxpayers Association said legal advertisements laying the groundwork for circulation of referendum and initiative petitions will appear Friday.

If the City Council votes on this evening to sign an agreement for engineering services for the marina expansion, the UTA and other South San Francisco residents will begin seeking signatures on the petitions, Keegan said.

They will have 30 days to acquire the signatures of 10 per cent of the city's registered voters at the time of the last general election, he said.

However, if the council again delays action in the marina as it has done several times in the past, the opponents will begin circulating the initiative petitions, Keegan said.

State laws allow 180 days to gather signatures for an initiative. As with the referendum, 10 per cent of the city's registered voters must sign.

If the marina opponents are successful in gathering the required number of signatures, the council will be forced to place the proposed expansion on a citywide ballot.

Keegan and other marina opponents met Friday night with attorney James Himmel of San Bruno to kick-off the petition drive.

Joining Keegan on the marina ballot committee are UTA President John Falsarella, Douglas Butler, Ronald Acosta and Douglas Dawkins of San Bruno.

Acosta previously fought the council over its plans to build a $3.5 million police and fire department complex. The council eventually withdrew its plans to build after it became apparent Acosta's suit would tie up the project for at least a year.

Dawkins is president of the San Mateo County Taxpayers Association and has led referendum campaigns in San Bruno, including the successful campaign in March to block expansion of "The Place" apartment complex.

The opponents contend in their advertisement that the marina is not economically feasible, that financial projections have been inadequate, that it will interfere with regular services provided by the city, and that there are more pressing needs in South San Francisco than a marina.

In addition, they point out that City Manager Walter Birkelo has publicly stated the cost of the marina could eventually escalate to as much as $10 million.

Robbery Suspects Sought

Two men, one of them armed, held up the 7-11 Store at Huntington and Angus avenues, San Bruno, Sunday night, getting away with about $150.

The men, according to San Bruno police, entered the store with a group of customers at about 11:15 p.m., wated until the store was empty, then pulled a gun and demanded money from the cash drawer.

Police said the men were white, between 22 and 25 years old, 5 feet 8 to 5 feet 9 and of medium build.

Car in Reverse Flies Off

A Daly City woman escaped with a bump on the head when the car she was driving flew over a 10-foot embankment and came to rest in a Broadmoor backyard.

The freak accident occurred at 9:30 p.m. last Wednesday when Katheryn Dedrick of 501 San Diego Ave., Daly City, stopped at the 7-11 Store at Edgeworth Avenue and 87th Street.

After being involved in a minor collision when she drove into the parking lot, Ms. Dedrick went into the store and did some shopping, according to Daly City Police.

She got ready to leave, put the car in reverse and stepped on the accelerator — too hard.

The car shot out of the parking lot, crossed the street and sailed — still in reverse — over an embankment into the backyard of Mrs. Florence Hopman, 34 Village Lane, Broadmoor, according to the police report.

The car damaged a fence and some trees before it came to rest against the house. The residence was not damaged, although police estimated about $1,000 damage to the property. The car was almost a total loss.

Ms. Dedrick was taken to Mary's Help Hospital and later transferred to Chope Hospital, where she was treated and released for a bump on the head.

Police said further investigation is underway.

Bill Seeks to Plug Loopholes

District Cited in Legislation

A bill pending in the state legislature to plug loopholes by which former school administrators and teachers receive consulting fees will have an effect on the Jefferson Elementary School District.

Assemblywoman Carol Hallett, R-Atascadero, the bill's author, has cited the case of Marjorie Tobias as an example of the kind of "double-dipping" that her measure is designed to stop.

Miss Tobias, a former JESD teacher and principal, has served as an "educational consultant" for the district during the past two years. For her services, she receives $100 a day when working.

The State Teachers' Retirement System, however, charges Miss Tobias has earned almost $20,000 from the district during those two years, and that she also has received her $19,000 a year full pension.

The JESD claims Miss Tobias is an independent contractor and, as such, is entitled to both her pension and consultant fees.

The pending bill would attempt to plug loopholes by which former administrators and teachers avoid the $5,000 cap on consulting fee income, and it would insure that districts report their consulting fees to the state.

State law bars retired teachers and administrators from receiving more than $5,000 a year income from a district for doing the same type of work done while fully employed by the district and while continuing to be eligible for a pension.

State officials contend that at least 35 persons in the state, however, are collecting income in excess of the $5,000.

"These 35 don't even scratch the surface," says Newton Byrd, assistant to the chief officer of the State Teachers Retired Board. He said the law bars him from releasing these names.

These 35 or more persons make no payments into the financially troubled State Teachers Retirement Fund, which state officials estimate has about $8 billion in unfunded liability.

It also could mean that these retired employes hold jobs that unemployed teachers want. So it is no surprise that the California Teachers Association is one of the main backers of the pending legislation.

The bill cleared the Assembly by a unanimous vote, and is now awaiting Senate action.

The JESD has been asked by the State Teachers' Retirement System to dig into its files for more information about Miss Tobias' duties.

Leighton Case, assistant chief executive officer, has said, "If their (the district's) material supports the independent theory, we'll drop the issue. If not, we'll go to a hearing."

Byrd says the law does allow districts to hire "independent contractors" who don't face a $5,000 lid on consulting income if they are truly independent contractors.

But he says: "We have told the Jefferson School District they are not conforming with the law in spirit or in any other way because she is doing the same job she was before. As far as we're concerned, she wasn't really retired."

Byrd says eventually the board may move to rescind Miss Tobias' retirement and require her to make back payments into the State Teachers Retirement Fund.

She and the Jefferson district could fight that move in court, he said.

The way a case like Miss Tobias' affects the squeezed State Teachers Retirement Fund, Byrd said, is that teachers are motivated to retire early to take lucrative consulting jobs with districts.

"The earlier a person retires, the more it costs the system in retirement funds," Byrd said.

Byrd said he hoped Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. would sign the Hallett bill, AB 1002.

The State Teachers Retirement Fund now takes in about $950 million a year in payments from working teachers and school districts and pays out $375 million a year in retirement benefits, he said.

Although this looks good at first glance, he added, actually the payments are not enough to support the drain on the fund that will come as the many teachers retire who taught the big crop of post-World War II children.

"It's projected we could go for 42 years before we'd have to liquidate our assets," he said because of the "unfunded liability" crunch.

Since the system was set up in 1913, it has never been fully funded, Byrd said.

"If the system should terminate today, we could pay the benefits of the people who have retired, but we'd be $8 billion short of giving back everyone who's paid into the system their money plus interest," he explained.

Jefferson Funds Program

Jefferson Elementary School District trustees last Monday night approved the expenditure of $58,613 to continue the Mentally Gifted program.

The program will provide services for 235 students and involve three teachers, two aides and two additional persons. Cost to the district is $8,388 more than the current school term.

The approved program was one of three alternatives presented for board review. One alternative called for a $39,267 expenditure, while the other would have cost $36,996.

With the capacity for 235 students JESD will reopen testing for the mentally gifted, since only 201 returning students are expected in the program.

Students will be tested on a priority system based on the date a teacher has referred a student to the program.

In other action, trustees:

• Authorized Betty Poplack to apply for $852,424 in funds under such programs as Title 1 SB 90, bilingual education, Early Childhood Education and preschool education.

• Presented their initial counterproposal to Chapter 233 of the California School Employes Association. The statement, read by Board President Alvin Schwarabach, indicated the board will consider "a fair and equitable increase in salary for all employes in the bargaining unit commensurate with the ability of the district to pay."

The board also offered not to reduce health and welfare insurance program benefits for its classified employes.

• Approved Colma Intermediate School's request to hold graduation exercises at Jefferson High School at 11 a.m. June 17.

• Accepted, as a gift, a flowering plum tree from sixth graders at Westlake School. The tree is to be planted on school grounds.

Student Elected to Jeff Board

Andy Serrano, a 17-year-old junior at Jefferson High, is the first student representative elected to the Jefferson Union High School District Board of Trustees.

Trustees had voted in March to provide for a non-voting student board member. The action came after the district's Student Advisory Council petitioned the board for membership under the provisions of a new state law.

Serrano will represent district students for six months, after which the student advisory council will elect a new representative.

The Daly City youth will assume his board seat at the July 7 meeting.

The junior class president at Jefferson High lives at 131 Flournoy St. with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Serrano. He has been a Daly City resident for 11 years.

Serrano has been a class officer for the past three years and his outside interests include public speaking.

He was chosen after a spirited election conducted for the students by Tom Panagoulias, district director of pupil personnel services.

Panagoulias called the election "a beautiful exercise" and said, "I would hope you have the same type of dialogue when you have elections on your school campuses."

The 12 members of the Student Advisory Council sharply questioned candidates Serrano, Donna Sims, Scott Galehouse and Dave Powell about their qualifications.

One council member told Powell, son of JUHSD board president Jane Powell, "At least you'll have a ride to the meetings."

Serrano in his campaign speech pointed out his qualifications as an effective public speaker. He said he has no issues to bring to the board immediately, but promised to work "for what the group wants."

After Serrano was elected, the council went on to elect Miss Sims as chairman of the group. Miss Sims is an Oceana High sophomore.

Powell, a junior at Westmoor High, was elected vice-chairman and Kellie Goodwin of Oceana was named recording secretary of the council.

Cancer Society Needs Summertime Helpers

For many persons in San Mateo County, summer means getting away from it all. For cancer patients summer means a time when they still must receive radiation treatment and transportation to hospitals for that treatment.

Aileen Brian, transportation coordinator for the San Mateo County Unit of the American Cancer Society, says about 25 additional drivers are needed to fill in for "Freewheelers" who will be vacationing this summer.

"We want to make it clear that the patients are not physically disabled; it's just that they need someone to transport them to and from local hospitals because they are somewhat weak. Many are elderly people who live alone, have no family and really no one to help them," she added.

Drivers should be able to contribute an average of two or three hours per week, and will be reimbursed for the gasoline they use. Parking fees also are reimbursable." Drivers whovolunteer can deduct the gasoline expenses as a charitable donation.

Persons interested in helping this summer — especially in the South San Francisco, San Bruno and Daly City areas — can contact the Society's office at 341-8749 and ask for Jean.

Mrs. Brian said the Society's San Mateo County Unit recently honored 34 of the county's more than 125 active "Freewheelers" at an awards luncheon.

Those receiving the highest awards for giving extraordinary service as drivers included Ronnie Carrillo and Helen Kiley of Daly City and Suzanne Johanson of San Bruno.

Also honored at the luncheon were Aileen Guadagni of Burlingame, Ronnie Carrillo, Helen Kiley and Mario O'Donnell of Daly City; Fred Daniloff, Gioconda Egan, Eugene Fanucchi and L.A. Grey of Pacifica; and Mary Angelich, Harold Grosz and Mary Jo Juster of San Bruno.

Insanity Topic At Mock Trial

The San Mateo Council on Mental Health and the Law is presenting a seminar and mock trial on the subject of insanity and diminished capacity.

The two-part seminar will be June 29-30 at 7:30 p.m. in the San Mateo City Council Chambers. The chambers are located on O'Farrell Street adjacent to the City Hall in San Mateo. The medical and local communities can attend free of charge.

The San Mateo Council is composed of representatives from the Superior Court, District Attorney's Office, Bar Association, San Mateo County Mental Health and local psychological and psychiatric association.

Program participants include the Honorable Frank Piombo, psychiatrists Richard Fisch and Elizabeth Jeffress, psychologist Alfred Fricke, and attorney Tom Nolan, Phil Cronin and Jack McInernev.

Storage Business Wins Colma Council Go-Ahead

Colma's City Council Wednesday accepted a project application to develop five acres off Junipero Serra Boulevard as a storage business.

The council's action instructed the Knuppe Development Co. to prepare documents for consideration of an environmental impact report on the project.

The land for the proposed development recently was sold to Knuppe by the Woodlawn Cemetery. The proposed business is individual storage units for public rental and includes two storage buildings.

Development of the project would require rezoning by the council from G-1 to C-1, commercial designation.

SSF Plans for Bilingual Class

By JANET PARKER

A detailed three-year plan to bring the South San Francisco Unified School District into compliance with the bilingual education provisions of the 1964 Civil Rights Act have been proposed to the board of trustees.

The proposed program will cost the district an estimated $138,465 to implement — on top of $255,759 the district says it's already spending toward bilingual education.

Secondary Education Specialist Robert Parr, chairman of the district's Bilingual Task Force, said the proposal is in direct response to the Office of Civil Rights notice of noncompliance last year.

The proposed plan, he said, developed in three stages — a 1976 language dominance survey of students; a needs assessment of parents, students and teachers using a questionnaire; and the task force's development of a plan for the three major language groups that were identified.

The language survey conducted last year found that the highest concentration of limited and non-English speaking students in the district are Spanish, Filipino, Cantonese and a growing segment of Samoans.

Of the limited English speaking students in the SSFUSD, 218 are Spanish, 76 are Filipino, and 34 are Cantonese. There also are 75 non-English speaking Spanish students, according to the survey.

However, the civil rights laws, Parr pointed out, require the district to provide bilingual education for students of all nationalities. In the SSFUSD, it will include 17 different languages — from Arabic to Vietnamese.

According to Parr, the district currently provides English as a Second Language (ESL) instruction at two elementary schools — Martin and Spruce — consisting of one teacher and one aide.

In addition, six bilingual aides meet on a regular basis with students at various schools who teachers identified as needing language help.

The task force report notes that the present program is on a "pull-out" basis, with students taken out of the classroom for instruction. Parr said OCR has found this unsatisfactory to date.

Among other deficiencies, the report notes, the program has no diagnostic testing procedure and no adopted curriculum materials.

The task force proposed that the elementary school bilingual program consist of a districtwide ESL program and two bilingual-bicultural programs.

The secondary program, as proposed, will consist of upgrading ESL programs by instituting bilingual tutorial centers at Westborough Junior High and El Camino and South San Francisco high schools. Two bilingual aides will be hired at each school.

The Spanish transitional bilingual program at Parkway Junior High School will be maintained and one bilingual Spanish speaking aide will be added.

The general goal at the secondary level, the task force report states, will be to use the mother tongue of the target group for instruction. This is expected to produce a higher proficiency in ESL, math and social studies.

The task force also has submitted nine master plan recommendations that the trustees are expected to act upon June 25.

Included are organization of a district advisory committee and individual school advisory committees "where warranted" on bilingual education in the fall.

Also proposed is hiring a bilingual resource teacher-coordinator to administer the entire district program at a minimum salary of $12,266.

School officials got a chance to comment on the proposed plan at a trustee meeting last week.

Edna DeLarios, principal of Westborough Junior High, told the board she's concerned about the costs of implementing the program. She also pointed out that some statistics may be inaccurate. While 19 students at Westborough were identified as Tagalog-speaking, the faculty is having a hard time finding those students, she said.

"The money we have to spend is to meet the needs of all our students and not a disproportionate share," she said. It might not be necessary, she said, for the district to go to the lengths proposed to meet OCR standards.

Her remarks infuriated Nelva Martinez, a longtime supporter of bilingual education in the district.

"We're still being discriminated against in the schools," Mrs. Martinez said. She said she's "boiling with anger" over a lack of enthusiasm toward bilingual education. And, she said, she's ready to sue the district if bilingual education isn't wholeheartedly supported.

A bilingual teacher at Spruce School, Lee Simpson, said the district's contribution to bilingual education has been exaggerated. All materials are provided by federal money. The district, he said, hasn't contributed $1 beyond salaries for teachers.

"I think it's a crime," Simpson said

GUIDE

BRIGHT LIGHTS BY LLOYD ★ JOHNSON

Bright Lights' Perennial Vacation and Dining Guide

Once again it's that time of year when we put aside our standard Friday Bright Lights column to bring you our perennial vacation and dining out tabloid section. As always, we have designed it to supplement your summertime activities. It is to serve as a reference to Nevada night life action, as a source of valuable vacation tips and as an alphabetized listing of the best restaurants and night clubs throughout the Bay Area.

A wealth of information has been jammed into this vacation and travel guide, yet it only begins to scratch the surface. Yet you will realize the vast variety of activities here in the Golden West. For that matter, right here in the Bay Area you will discover, and hopefully savor, the best restaurants, hotels and night clubs to be found anywhere in the world.

But it is more than a guide just to the Bay Area. It is intended to take you beyond the counties of Northern California into the country of the redwoods, to such panoramic places as Canada, to such colorful and unusual lands as Mexico and Baja California, to the casinos and chorus lines revues of Nevada. Not to mention all points between.

We recommend you wisely keep this supplement with you whenever you get the itch to travel. As we've stressed before, and will continue always to stress, please be careful on your motoring trips and arrive at your destination safely and refreshed, ready to pursue those fun-filled pleasures which are spelled out in these pages.

We wish a happy vacation, and wonderful summer, to one and all.

Cindy Delmar and Terry Kargas, both of Marine World, arranged for the magnificent cat's visit to the Fisherman.

BEN JONSON
The Cannery
2801 Leavenworth

A restaurant full of the decor and memorabilia of the 17th Century — even to the point its waitresses are dressed in low-cut blouses to resemble the kind of wenches poet Ben Jonson caroused with and pinched. Different cuts of Prime Rib provide the main courses, which are preceded by specialty dishes. Strolling vocalist Roberta Sengstack entertains with troubadour Janet Smith Wednesday and Thursday. BERTOLUCCI'S
431 Cypress
South San Francisco
588-1625

Initially designed for laborers in the nearby steel mills, this restaurant, throughout the years, has developed into not only a landmark but a haven for celebrities from all walks of life. A major refurbishing took place in the early 1960's, and now Bertolucci's is one of the most elegant of dining rooms. Mama Bertolucci still keeps a matriarchal eye on the kitchen and her Cannelloni is a house specialty, as well as Eggplant Parmigiana. Excellent banquet facilities.

BIG AL'S SKYLARK RESTAURANT
63 W. 37th Avenue
San Mateo
345-9042

"Big Al" Green is a little lady weighing in at 115 pounds, and although she is the mother of seven, she has returned to the restaurant business. She has managed three restaurants before this one and the key to her continuing success are her home made items — her "start from scratch" soups and her cut-to-order meats. Patrons are especially ecstatic over her homemade bread pudding. Full course luncheons from $2.50. "Big Al," naturally, caters to the kiddies, so we recommend this for family dining.

Dinners were introduced a few weeks back in the upstairs dining room, with Roast Beef, Steaks and Seafood now available. Otherwise known as "Al King's Place," since this is where the "king" of the bookers hangs out. Because Al has an eye for picking the best ... and he's given us everything but singing caterpillars and chorus line fleas. Al has seen the best and he's seen the worst. Give Al a call because he'll know exactly what it is you're looking for in terms of superior grade entertainment.

G. Mardikian Receives Award

George Mardikian, who owns and operates Omar Khayyam's in San Francisco, was one of six Americans who recently received a special award when President Jimmy Carter officially opened Ellis Island as an immigration museum and park.

Mardikian is the Western Director of the Restore Ellis Island Committee and was instrumental in convincing the House of Representatives to allocate $2 million for the renovation of the island. Another $3 million for additional alterations to Ellis Island is pending.

During the award presentations, President Carter commented that "our growth as a nation has been achieved ... through the genius and industry of immigrants of every race and from every quarter of the world. The story of their pursuit of happiness is the saga of America."

George M. Mardikian

Mardikian is indeed part of the American story of pioneering. He first came to the United States 55 years ago and worked his way up the ladder to where he is today: the owner of a popular San Francisco restaurant that is famed for its Persian decor and its Armenian food specialties. Mardikian pioneered lamb dishes in America and has written a book, "Dinner at Omar Khayyam's," which outlines his many unique recipes.

But Mardikian is more than just a successful restaurateur.

He is an author of a world-famous book, "Song of America;" he is a lecturer; he is an experienced world traveler; he has established important food seminars, and he is director of the Golden Gate Restaurant Association. Last year the American Restaurant Magazine added Mardikian to its ever-growing Hall of Fame.

On the recent Ellis Island ceremonies, Mardikian remarked, "We are keeping alive the memory of millions of immigrants who passed through the island. And we will continue our work in Washington to see tt the necessary funding is made available to us."

Also unlimited is the amount of salad you can eat from the salad bar. A baked potato is included with dinner. All for less than $5. Lunches served weekdays, dinners seven nights a week. Vince's Italian and Seafood Restaurant Is a Tradition

Tony Licata has taken over Vince's Seafood Italian Restaurant and Cocktail Lounge, located at 1528 El Camino Real in San Mateo, and is continuing to build the business started by his late father, Vince Licata.

The reputation of Vince's Restaurant, that it is "The Fisherman's Wharf of the Peninsula," is justified. Everything the ocean has to offer is listed on the menu or is available at Vince's open air seafood depot, which is just a few steps north of the restaurant.

In the after section of the depot is the seafood delicatessen and poultry addition featuring delicacies for the home table.

The Licata family has worked many years to establish this successful business and carry out their father's theme that "the family that works together stays together."

Vince's will enjoy a vacation starting Sunday, June 12, through July 4 and will reopen Tuesday, July 5.

Bay Meadows 'Friendly Race Track'

Bay Meadows, the West's busiest race track, has embarked on another venture designed to make the progressive San Mateo course one of the most attractive and impressive "palaces" devoted to the sport of kings.

The project will be virtually completed by the time the San Mateo County Fair racing season gets under way July 25, and from that point on the infield will be open on Saturdays for family groups and organizations to enjoy picnics, while witnessing the exciting pageantry of horse racing, the Nation's number one spectator sport.

ROBERT GUNDERSON

A new building has been constructed in the center of the infield and it will house concession stands and the clubhouse for the golf course, which, incidentally, has been closed during the reconstruction period. A couple of colorful tents are also being installed in the picnic areas.

Following the 12 day San Mateo County Fair, the track will again close for a few weeks, reopening on Labor Day for a long run of thoroughbred racing that will continue until almost Christmas. Gunderson expects the Labor Day program to attract many family groups for picnics in the new infield facility. Highlight of the autumn season is the running of the $100,000 added El Camino Real Stakes.

Gunderson is the executive head of the track, while Dr. William J. Ward of Hillsborough, one of racing's most versatile executives, oversees the activities of the harness and quarter horses, while also serving as a vice president of the California Jockey Club.

DR. WILLIAM J. WARD

One thing you can count on, the officers and directors of the California Jockey Club will not let any grass (other than the turf course) grow under their feet, as they continue in their dedication to making Bay Meadows as pleasant and comfortable a racetrack as there is anyplace on this earth.

Three Blocks Of Chinese American History In Locke

It is the last of its kind to survive in California, an all-Chinese village of plank sidewalks and overhanging balconies and tindery roofs.

It is only three blocks long, with fewer than 100 residents. Only some fluke of fate spared it from destruction by fire, which brought an end to other laboring villages like it where immigrant Chinese sought comfort by huddling together in the strange new world.

Still, in the town of Locke, they seek to live among themselves. As the visitor strolls among sagging walls, old men in black caps stare silently past as if to erase their presence or the visitor's.

Locke holds bittersweet ties for many old people among the California Chinese.

The Chinese were brought as laborers to the California Delta when the peat islands were being diked here along the Sacramento and San Joaquin rivers in the late 1850s. They came from the gold fields and later from gangs that had laid down the transcontinental railroads.

In the Delta they lifted shovel and wheelbarrow to build levees that have made the peat islands of central California some of the richest farmland in the world.

Pauline Stambaugh lives on nearby Grand Island in a stately old house shaded by a pear orchard beside Steamboat Slough. "I was postmistress right here for 23 years," she said, trying a door but finding it bolted. She peered through the dusty window.

"It was the Depression and I needed a job. Locke was wide open then. Fan-tan parlors, opium dens, girls. But you didn't have to see anything.

"I could talk a little Chinese, and the people trusted me. If they were sick I'd tell the doctor what was wrong. If the FBI or immigration people came, the Chinese wouldn't speak unless I said it was okay. But then people started moving to the cities and one day Locke just didn't need a post office anymore."

Locke's present vogue with city visitors, especially state government people from Sacramento, centers around Al's, an eccentric steak house where dollar bills line the ceiling and customers sit on wooden benches. The waitresses' only question is, "How do you want it?"

But Locke had as many as 1,500 residents in its big days.

Now there are no more than 15 families left; Locke is mostly an old men's home.

"Nothing has come after Locke and nothing will," says Ping Lee, a leading grocer of nearby Walnut Grove. "There won't be any more people in Locke for the simple reason that the agricultural thing doesn't work anymore."

That is because farming has been mechanized in the Delta, a bizarre community of 55 islands reclaimed from marshlands at the water crossroads of California.

The liveliest place besides Al's is the Yuen Chong market, presided over by Connie King, a handsome Chinese-American woman who bridges the ethnic gap in Locke and often acts as interpreter.

She collects monthly payments for household water from the town well, and rents due the Locke family corporation which owns the land.

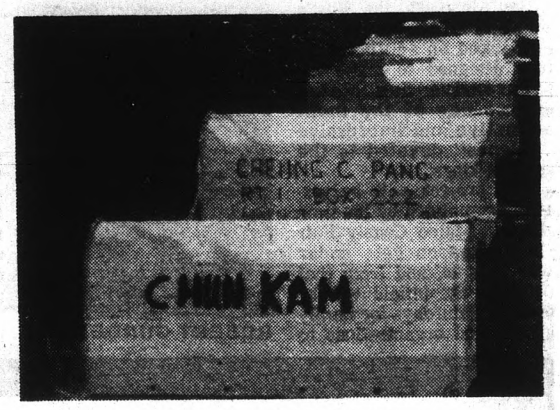
"Our town is dying," she said as she stood behind her counter between customers one morning. "Our children are gone. We have maybe six teen-agers left, but they'll go after they finish school. There is nothing for them here."

She and Ping Lee, whose father was a founder of Locke in 1915, take turns answering inquiries addressed to the nonexistent "Mayor of Locke" or "Locke Chamber of Commerce." They write prospective visitors that there is no place to stay for miles around.

Lee, a leader among the Chinese who remain in these river towns, sees some hope for Locke, but a slim one.

"It should be preserved. The Locke family heirs want to sell the townsite, but our people can't afford to buy. We want to make it a state park. But one quick fire could get it first."

The legislature recently funded state park acquisition of The Meadows, a houseboating area near Locke, but so far there is no money to buy Locke.



ORIENTAL FLAVOR

These rural mail boxes serve as silent evidence that Chinese-Americans still inhabit the California town of Locke that their forebears built more than half a century ago.

Former Race Track Is New Dining Haven

Located on the premises once occupied by the Tanforan Park Race Track, San Bruno's Tanforan Park Shopping Center is an attractive, multimillion dollar development for shopping, entertainment and dining.

Located on the lower level are the Nine Garden Restaurants under the supervision of General Manager Jack Kuks. A "come-as-you-are" atmosphere prevails and there is seating for over 500 eaters.

Each of the restaurants is distinctive, each "kitchen" specializing in individualized cuisine. Making a menu choice is the major problem faced by many customers.

Pizza and several kinds of franks are available at Red Carpet Hot Dog and Pizza. Also breakfasts, featuring egg dishes and tasty omelettes. Several fish items were recently introduced at the Red Carpet.

Hamburgers dominate The Hamburger Inn. Seventeen types, including such favorites as the Mushroom Burger and Hawaiian-style burgers.

Fanciers of Chinese cuisine will want to flock around the King Wong restaurant. The a la carte selections are plentiful and very appealing to budget conscious diners. Complete Chinese dinners and a brisk business in take-out items.

Creative Sandwiches is just as the name implies. Reasonably priced types ranging from roast beef to meat loaf to an avocado-with-bacon creation. Luncheon plates, too.

Quality steaks, chicken and a selection of Italian dishes are to be found at Steaks and Chicken Unique. Fresh salads are also on hand, but the major attraction remains the steaks, far less expensive than you will find elsewhere.

Combination platters are the favorite choices at Amigo Mike's. Tasty Mexican dishes can be ordered by number. One combination that is very appealing includes chile rellenos, taco and beef enchilada.

One of the busiest restaurants in the complex is Hof Brau. Here you run the gamut: lunches, dinners, side orders, etc. Daily specials, sandwiches, salads and beverages.

For shoppers taking only a brief break there is Donut World. Just about every type of donut and/or pastry imaginable can be found here, as well as assorted beverages. All the "goodies" can be packaged for take out.

Most of these restaurants offer their own desserts. However, Swensen's Ice Cream Shoppe is also on the premises, offering 40 different favors of Swensen's ice cream — not to mention milkshakes, sodas, freezes and other thirst-quenching specialties.

Pie House Became California's First Theater

"Many a miner passed through this door,

"Who swore he would never come in any more.

"Twas here they eased him of nuggets of gold.

"This was the place where booze was sold.

"One drink was enough to make him want more,

"And pretty damn soon he was flat on the floor.

"On sobering up he would always swear off.

"Then come the next day for a drink for his cough."

So read the sign on the door of the house that Jack Swan built in Monterey in 1844. The sign is still on the building's door at Scott and Pacific streets.

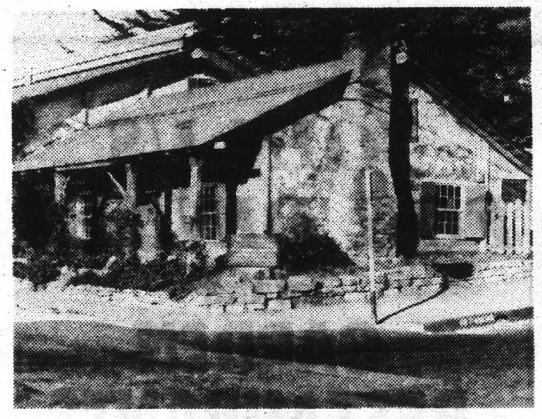
Swan, a Scotsman, jumped ship in 1843 at Monterey in hopes of becoming a successful businessman. His first venture was to build a structure which would be a pie house, inn and saloon. It soon became known as "The House That Jack Built" and catered to sailors on leave from their ships at Monterey Bay.

Everything went fine for Swan until 1847 when the alcalde shut down Swan's place, declaring it "in violation of anti-liquor and gambling laws."

However, Swan was not one to give up easily. He soon transformed his house into a dining facility and it was once again the popular "in spot" for the community.

It only seemed natural when Swan gave his approval to a group of sailors desiring to put on a minstrel show in his house.

The show proved an overwhelming success and in the winter a group of former soldiers got Swan's approval to put on a play, which would establish the house that Jack built as the first theater in California.



JACK'S HOUSE

The "House That Jack Built" in Monterey is now a theater-museum where melodramas are presented on holidays and throughout the summer. The 1844 structure is California's first theater.

Le Trianon Is Not Fish Story

Le Trianon is a beautiful resort located on the edge of several gorgeous lakes on Highway 20, not far from Ukiah.

It is open year round, has ample recreational vehicle facilities and is well known among fisherman who are looking for the big ones in trout and bass.

The lakes surrounding Le Trianon are the kind which yield the kind that fisheren like to take home and show their friends — and believe us, this is no fish story.

No water skiing is allowed in the Le Trianon lakes, assuring you of the kind of solitude necessary for respectable angling.

Le Trianon is a family-oriented resort featuring cabins, camping areas, barbecue pits, swimming and boating.

"Vive Paris Vive" Show At Bimbo's 365 Nite Club

Las Vegas came to San Francisco when Barry Ashton's "Vive Paris Vive" opened for a limited engagement at Bimbo's 365 Club.

This is the same revue which won the annual Las Vegas Entertainment Award as "Revue of the Year" while playing at the Flamingo Hotel.

Its arrival also marked the revival of Bimbo's as a first class theater-restaurant and night club.

From the moment the curtain opens on the first spectacular set depicting the Paris Moulin Rouge with all the traditional characters — the can-can dancers, the cafe patrons, Jane Avril and the legendary Toulouse-Lautrec — it is obvious that this is a class production with a large cast of talented performers, lavish costuming and imaginative sets.

But, as one reviewer put it, "The true stars are Barry's gorgeous girls, young, beautiful and barely dressed in exquisitely designed costumes abounding in furs, feathers and rhinestones.

The fast-paced show in eleven scenes runs the gamut from lavish production numbers through spicy and sophisticated mini-scenes — to great European comedy acts, such as the "Jolly Jovers" direct from the Las Vegas MGM Show, and the exciting music with some of the best dancing seen on any stage, Broadway or Las Vegas.

There Are No Motels In "Who's Who" Land

There are more than 200 hotels, lodges and inns in this palmy desert resort — but not one motel.

At least they're not called that. The term 'motel' is taboo here.

"We don't want to cheapen our image", said a Palm Springs Visitors and Convention Bureau official.

For that matter there aren't any tourists either — only "visitors" — 1.5 million of them a year.

"Rest and relaxation away from the hustle and bustle of that other world is what mainly attracts them," the official said.

"That and, of course, our famous sunshine."

Quiet refinement has been the watchword here since the "village" — as residents still like to refer to it — was founded as a retreat for film stars away from the gaudy glare of Hollywood. That's the way the locals want to keep it.

Strict building codes and rigid enforcement of ordinances have the object of maintaining the kind of atmosphere which first beckoned those seeking relaxation in the desert. Large, garish, neon, blinking or otherwise "objectionable" signs are barred. So are drive-in restaurants which, in the opinion of city planners, "tend to downgrade the resort atmosphere."

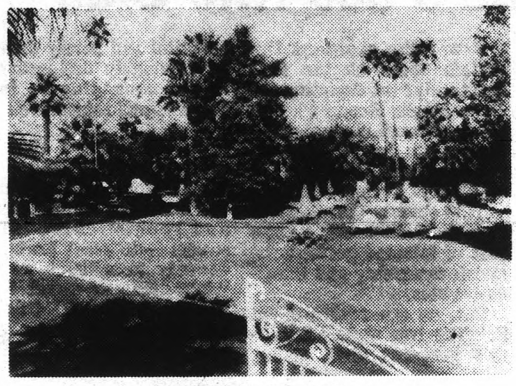
Accommodations range from modest establishments which are in fact motels in all but name to first-class hotels that have the atmosphere of exclusive estates.

One of the most exclusive is in fact a converted estate. The Ingleside Inn still could be mistaken for someone's private home. Big wrought iron gates give on to a winding drive, at the end of which stands a Rolls-Royce. The limousine is used to pick up guests from the airport.

The estate belonged nearly half a century ago to the Humphrey Birge family, fabricators of the fashionable Pierce Arrow auto. It passed into the hands of socially proper Palm Springs pioneer Ruth Hardy, who opened it as a secluded rendervous for selected paying guests. The garage was turned into a dining room. Bungalows were added, together with formal garden, swimming pool, croquet and shuffleboard courts.

The guest book became a "Who's Who" of high society, politics, diplomacy, the arts, big business — and, of course, show business.

Howard Hughes registered there on Oct. 12, 1946, and paid $20 for tne night's rest and recreation. John Wayne stayed there on Dec. 2, 1941. Greta Garbo found seclusion there. So did Elizabeth Taylor, Rita Hayworth, Katherine Hepburn, Bette Davis and many other stars. Their pictures smile down on today's guests from the walls of the inn's famous photo gallery.



ELEGANT INN

The Ingleside Inn, a secluded former estate snuggled against the San Jacinto Mountains in Palm Springs, offers guests the Old World charm of bygone days when it catered to the "carriage trade." Villas surround immaculate lawns with its swimming pool and swirling Jacuzzi. Each room contains elegantly restored antiques.

When Ruth Hardy died, the inn was turned over to absentee ownership. It began to slide into history, a neglected, rusticating place of fading charm, forgotten by all but a few old-timers.

Then, Mel Haber, a young Brooklyn-born entrepreneur who runs 20 companies, visited Palm Springs for a short vacation in 1974. He took one look at the run-down Ingleside estate and decided he would buy it and restore it to its former glory.

He spent half a million dollars renovating and refurbishing it, restoring the mahogany masterpieces, the ornate mirrors, parquet floors, Spanish doors, while maintaining its antique elegance. He found many treasures hidden away, including imperial jade, art, books, photographs, each with its own priceless story to tell.

"I stole this place for the land value alone — about $325,000," admitted 39-year-old Haber. "It took me 15 minutes after I first saw it to make up my mind. I was fascinated by its history.

"I didn't know a thing about the hotel or restaurant business, and spent more to dress it up than I ever planned. But today it's going great and I wouldn't take a million for it."

Each room and villa is decorated on a different theme and with exquisite taste. There are only 26 rooms. Suites for two go for up to $140 a night but a double room can be had for as low as $44 out of season and a single room for $30.

Bouzoukis Are Coming!

This Sunday at 8 p.m., the musical revue "Bouzouki, I Love You," will be presented in the Paramount Theater in Oakland.

Conceived, produced and directed by Pericles Phillips, the two hour presentation features the Greek Festival Company of Oakland, a troupe that has made several appearances at the Sahara Tahoe as well as at Northern California colleges.

Casino Goes To The Dog — But Dog Gives It Back

Pup is no ordinary German shepherd.

While it is true he howls at the full moon, buries bones in his master's backyard and loves to have his ears scratched, there are some irresistible urges within his canine body that other dogs would consider downright bizarre.

Even people have considered some of Pup's habits bizarre. One lady, for example, was so startled her mouth fell open and her dentures popped out.

Pup's problem is simple: He has the gambling fever.

Put him in front of a fire hydrant and a casino, and he'll pick the casino every time.

Quite frequently, to satisfy his unique "call of the wild," Pup will pop into Barney's Casino at South Shore Lake Tahoe.

Pup loves blackjack. He can flip his cards when he's supposed to, and he can rake in the chips — if he's lucky. A lot of the time he has to throw his paws across his eyes when the dealer rakes in the chips.

Some dogs are just sore losers.

And Pup loves to roll dice. Seven come eleven means more gravy — Gravy Train to him. Snake-eyes? It's enough to make him want to howl.

But Pup's greatest weakness is his love for the slot machine. Pup knows you can't put the three cherries on top of a dog biscuit, so don't underestimate him as he picks up a silver dollar with his teeth and drops it into the nearest slot.

You can see it in Pup's brown eyes: He just knows the casino is about to go to the dog.

He's great at pulling handles. His limpid brown eyes rotate with the spinning columns and his tongue hangs out a little as he awaits the final outcome. His tail wags eagerly.

A lot of the time at Barney's, Pup wins. And therein is an even bigger problem than his penchant for gambling. You see, Pup has to return whatever he wins to Robert G. Berry, Barney's Chief Executive Officer.

The return of the money is predicated on a legal document between Berry and Pup's owner. The document states: "Barney's will supply the money to play the giant 'Big Barney' slot machine, and Pup will play said slot machine. Any winnings, payoffs or jackpots of any kind whatsoever shall be deemed the property of Barney's Club and not Pup or Pup's owner.

As Pup would tell you, if he could talk, there are just some days it doesn't pay to get out of the doghouse.

HOUSE OF THE SUN

Haleakala crater on Maui in the Hawaiian Islands earned its name when the ancient demigod, Maui, caught the sun to give the island longer daylight hours.

Former Capital Hawaii

Lahaina, Maui, the former capital of the kingdom of Hawaii, has three principal lines of history. It was the home of the royal family in the early days of the monarchy, it was the bawdy waterfront town where crews of whaling vessels caroused, and it was the site of early New England missionary efforts to convert the carefree Hawaiians to a rigid religion.

Clapboard houses and stores, many more than a century old, dominate the waterfront streets of this bustling community that stretches long and narrow along the beach.

It is now a thriving tourist community, with a mixture of picturesgue past and modern commercial energy.

The island essentially is two volcanic land masses connected by a broad fertile valley. It covers 728 square miles of golden sand beaches; tropical rain forests; slender waterfalls; vast acres of sugarcane, pineapple and vegetable crops; cattle ranches; hundreds of private and rental yachts and fishing boats, mostly at Lahaina; and the desert-arid caldera of the extinct volcano known as Haleakala.

Maui lives about 70 miles southeast of Oahu, and may be reached in a 25-minute flight or in a two-hour hydrofoil ferry from Honolulu.

Frankie Fanelli At Harvey's

Tonopah Where Miners Got Soaked for Water

Gold and silver were not the only products of Mother Nature treasured in the mining camps of yesteryear.

Many valuable diggings could not have existed without the presence of water — so valuable in the mining process and the miners' personal lives.

Oddly enough, a dry diggings 207 miles northwest of Las Vegas was given the inappropriate name of Tonopah by prospector Jim Butler, who stumbled upon the silver-rich area in May of 1900.

Tonopah is the Shoshone word for "little spring," yet the diggings did not have any water for miles around. Its lack of water was one of the reasons other prospectors had avoided the sector pre-Viously.

News of Butler's silver strike spread throughout the West and hundreds of miners raced for Tonopah. Many found silVer, but none located water.

Water was treme importance for the livestock and the newly formed minimg enterprises, and stage companies were forced to purchase their own tank wagons to haul the liquid to the mine.

Several stern newspapers saw humor in Tonopah's water shortage and a few declared editorially that the situation was not as bad as it was made out to be.

"After all," wrote one Nevada sagebrush editor, "Tonopahans neither drink water nor use it to take baths in."

But Tonopah citizenry did not think the matter was so funny, especially considering that many prospectors brought their wives and children with them.

Before long, alert promoters took advantage of the dire situation, brought water wagons to the isolated diggings and sold water to eager purchasers by the barrel.

The miners, and particularly their wives, carefully used and reused each drop of water. Using one bucket of water, a lady washed her hands, cleaned fruit, laundered her clothes, scrubbed the floors and irrigated her small garden.

A barber, who had not been successful in his mining ventures, struck it rich by creating an ingenious gadget that became the only bathing facility in early Tonopah.

Using the water crisis to his advantage, the barber dug a hole behind his shop and lowered a barrel of water into the ground. A pump was placed in the barrel and a piece of grating, connected to the pump, was put on top of ths barrel in a teeter-totter fashion.

When a bather stood on this odd contraption and shifted weight from one foot to the other, water would shower down and then be filtered back into the barrel to be used again.

Four bits bought permission to take a shower, plus the use of a bar of soap and a towel.

Meanwhile, Tonopah's population blossomed out over the countryside and before long, word of the great silver strike (and water shortage) spread around the world.

In its first year of existence, Tonopah produced more than $4 million of silver but not a single barrel of water. The 3,000 citizens patronized the half-dozen water companies but there simply was not enough water to go around.

Eventually, some of the water became badly contaminated. This, coupled with Tonopah's poor sanitation facilities, caused an epidemic in the winter of 1904.

Only after 56 deaths were recorded did the city form a committee to watch over the fresh water that now was piped in and set sanitation standards.

With new regulations, the silver community continued to prosper and soon the great water crisis of infant Tonopah was forgotten amidst the city's success.

Today, few old-timers remain (in the town at the junction of U.S. highways 6 and 95) who can recall the great excitement surrounding the wagon days when water was regarded in importance second only to silver.

But the pages of history will always show that although Tonopah boasted 50 saloons, it was the "driest diggings in Nevada."

But few of those viewers now that today the name Ponderosa stands for a real-life counterpart on the Nevada shore of scenic Lake Tahoe.

It was In 1967 when the Ponderosa Ranch was actually built in the very spot where it was depicted in the long-running NBC Western adventure series.

When the doors were opened to the public, it marked the realization of a dream for millions of avid "Bonanza" viewers all over the world.

How Do You Rate At The Tamarack?

When they say the Tamarack is the "in" motel, they don't mean "inn;" they really mean "in."

In case you haven't already heard, the Tamarack; located on the south shore of Lake Tahoe at 3620 Lake Tahoe boulevard (Highway 50 next to Vagabond) is an X-rated motel.

Which means it presents movies on a closed circuit that runs to each room. You can enjoy those films in your own privacy.

Silver Queen Near Silver Machines

The Silver Queen Inn, located just one short block from the Nugget in the heart of downtown Carson City, is one of the finest places we've ever stayed in. It features queen-size beds, direct dial phones and penthouse suites.

And you are only 30 minutes from Virginia City, Tahoe or Reno — putting you at the scene of action but still giving you some sense of exclusivity by staying in an unusual place.

The Silver Queen Inn is located at 201 West Caroline in Carson City.

George M. Mardikian

NATIONAL RECOGNITION AWARD

By FREEDOM'S FOUNDATION AT VALLEY FORGE To GEORGE MARDIKIAN

For his deep and abiding love for his adopted America.

For his prodigious efforts to tell America about the blessings of freedom too often taken for granted.

"That July morning when I first saw the Statute of Liberty from the deck of the immigrant steamer, it was like suddenly hearing a hymn of hope.

"The priceless thing America has given me has nothing to do with money or fame . . . I call it the dignity of being American.

"Many fine young Americans have a chance to be something . . . have faith in yourself, faith in your Country, and, third and foremost, faith in almighty God. Back this up with hard work and nothing can stop you."

It is the home of many new American gastronomical delights. Its colorful owner is George M. Mardikian, famous author of "Song of America," published by McGraw Hill Book Company; "I Found the Happy Land," published by Reader's Digest; many philosophical essays in "This Week Magazine" and, of course, not forgetting his famous cook book "Dinner at Omar Khayyam's" now in its 12th edition.

It was George M. Mardikian who added to the American vocabulary such words as Lavash (Armenian bread), Rose Petal Preserves, Shish Kebab, Pilaff, Kouzou Kzartma Dolma, Paklava, Haigagan Salad, Patlijan and Tchakhokhbelli Chicken and many more.

Many special articles have been written in such National and International magazines as Reader's Digest, Life, Time, Newsweek, Saturday Evening Post, Look, Collier's, This Week, Parade, Women's Home Companion and twice in the Congressional Record.

Known from one end of the world to the other, it was George M. Mardikian who made the great Persian Poet, Philosopher and Astronomer, Omar Khayyam's name synonymous with good food and good living.
